Dr. Sharlene Osman, director for Medical Affairs, disclosed this startling fact to the board Friday, adding that the hospital remains at a very critical stage due to its continued shortage of physicians.

"We have to fill those holes. That's the only way to realize revenues [for the corporation]... We must employ doctors," she told the board.

Commonwealth Healthcare Corp. CEO

Juan N. Babauta earlier said that the corporation currently has 20 mostly full-time doctors. Of the number, two are assigned at the Rota Health Center. Though he admitted the need to recruit more physicians, Babauta emphasized that the number is stable for now.

Gov. Benigno R. Fitial's trial at the Senate will not start until March, senators said. This comes after the Senate, by a vote of 8-0, adopted during its Friday session on Tinian the rules that will govern the first ever impeachment trial in the history of the CNMI or any U.S. insular area.

► Senators also confirm 5 Fitial appointees

Senate President Jude Hofschneider (R-Tinian) is now preparing a letter to the governor for release this week, and the initial plan is to give the governor a week to respond to the charges against him. He said as of yesterday afternoon, that letter has yet to be sent out to Fitial.

The one-week timeline for the governor to respond could start from tomorrow, since today is President's Day holiday, a no-work holiday.

Under the rules, the governor is prohibited

Earhart mystery takes 3 to Saipan

REPORTER

Could a journey back to Saipan lead a group of experts to finally lay to rest the 76-year mystery of the disappearance of legendary aviatrix Amelia Earhart? That is what U.S.-based film director, producer, screenwriter, and freelance journalist Richard Martini, famed aircraft recovery lead investigator Michael Harris, and aircraft recovery specialist Capt. Paul H. Cooper are trying to answer in their ongoing research on Saipan.

The three are here to examine evidence whether Earhart, her co-pilot Fred Noonan, and their Lockheed Electra were on Saipan after they disappeared during their round-the-world flight in 1937.

Martini said there's over 200 islanders who claimed Earhart was here after 1937, and about a dozen U.S. Marines who claimed they found her plane on this U.S. island.

"Doesn't it make sense to follow the research to see if maybe she was here as opposed to where they have been looking in, in Nikumaroro, where there was no single eyewitness, where she was never in that direction?" Martini told Saipan Tribune in an interview on Friday afternoon.

House leadership hires Benavente as consultant

By HAIDEE V. EUGENIO
haidee_eugenio@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The House of Representatives leadership hired former representative and lieutenant governor Diego Benavente as a consultant for two months for a $7,200 contract or $3,600 a month.

Benavente, in an interview, said his consultant contract is from Jan. 15 to March 15, meeting the 60-day limitations for retired government officials.

Among his duties is assist the House leadership with organizational matters, help individual committees and all other legislative matters.

Benavente

The Constitution prohibits former government officials receiving pension from double-dipping for more than 60 days or two months in one fiscal year.

Even after the contract expires, Benavente assured that he will still be active in politics. Benavente, a co-founder of the so-called Independent Republicans, is a staunch supporter of the movement to impeach Gov. Benigno R. Fitial.

"I never quit. I will continue to do what I can as a private citizen and as a consultant," Benavente told Saipan Tribune.

Benavente has over 15 years of experience as a lawmaker and a four-year term as lieutenant governor.

He served as a House member from the 7th to the 12th Legislatures, as well as during the 15th Legislature. In the 17th Legislature, he stepped down after serving half of a three-year term. He was also former governor Juan N. Babauta's lieutenant governor from 2002 to 2006.

Former representative Joseph Palacios questioned Benavente's contract with the House leadership, saying it may have been an unnecessary one. The contract amount is taken out of the leadership account, which is also used to fund House committee programs and activities.

Valentine Health Walk draws 162 walkers

The Marianas Walking Association, teaming up with first-time title sponsor Marianas Health Services, had a hugely successful Valentine Health Walk on Saturday.

The Feb. 9 event began registration at 6am in the Utt at the Carolinian Affairs Office in Garapan before daybreak. The 162 participants were greeted by a heavy downpour that did not dampen their enthusiasm. As the registration and assignment of a registration number proceeded, a total of 65 people signed up to take their blood pressure and blood sugar checked. There were nine who had readings that were above normal for blood pressure and 13 had an elevated fasting blood sugar.

When the rain slowed to intermittent showers, the crowd began their health walk. The 5K turnaround was at the Japanese Tank, where the walkers received refreshing bottles of water and had their registration number checked. About a dozen really enthusiastic walkers proceeded to the 10K mark, before returning to the starting point. The first 100 to finish received a special commemorative T-shirt. The supply of shirts was completely exhausted, and the walkers received complimentary water bottles, 2013 Special Edition Health diaries, home emergency preparedness kits, and refreshing fruit snacks. The MHS staff and the Commonwealth Cancer Association volunteers distributed pamphlets regarding health measures and cancer prevention.

The youngest male and female walkers were both 2 years old. The oldest male was 74 and the female was 70. All four received gift certificates from MHS. The largest contingent from one company came from the staff of IT&E, uniformly dressed in very attractive t-shirts.

The walk had the following sponsors: Marianas Health Services and their staff, Coca Cola, Joanna's Transportation Services, Island Apparel, KZMI, KKMP, MVA, IT&E, Fiesta Resort and Spa, CCA, PDI, American Red Cross, Department of Homeland Security, Office of Carolinian Affairs, and the Commonwealth Cancer Control Program.

George Cruz, president of MHS, walked with his young son. Pleased with the walk's success, Cruz said, "We will begin planning for the 2014 walk before the end of the year." (MWA)

Kilili: It will be up to DOJ's Holder

By HAIDEE V. EUGENIO

REPORTER

Delegate Gregorio Kilili Sablan (Ind-MP) said it is up to U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder to look into allegations that Gov. Benigno R. Fitial did not renew the contract of acting Commonwealth Utilities Corp. executive director Alan Fletcher in retaliation for testifying against a sole-source $190.8-million power purchase agreement at the impeachment hearings.

Sablan said that filing charges against Fitial "goes all the way up to the highest authority in the U.S. Department of Justice...U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder."

In a Feb. 14 letter to Sablan, Senate President Jude Hofschneider (R-Tinian), and House Speaker Joseph DeLeon Guerrero (IR-Saipan), private citizen Glen Hunter urged these officials to call for an investigation by local and federal agencies into the "retaliatory tactics of the now impeached governor."

"There are whistleblower laws that help keep people in Fletcher's position from being harmed simply for telling the truth when asked," Hunter said.

Sablan said that Fletcher spoke the truth but "right now, the atmosphere is if you speak the truth you're in trouble. I think people should speak the truth."

"Fortunately for us the public, unfortunately for the power-that-be, both men were unafraid to speak the truth and stand up to those who tried to bully them. I think it was a wrong decision to let both Mr. [Abe] Malae and Mr. Fletcher leave," Sablan said.

In Hunter's letter to Sablan and legislative leaders, he asked them to call for an investigation by the CNMI Office of the Attorney General, Office of the Public Auditor, and the U.S. Attorney's Office into the governor's alleged retaliatory tactics.

The House speaker and vice speaker also earlier said Fletcher's non-renewal was an act of retaliation.

Fitial had accused Fletcher of lying to the impeachment committee.

The delegate also said both former CUC executive director Abe Malae and his successor, albeit in an acting capacity, Fletcher, "ushered in reliable power and vastly improved our water system." He said both Malae and Fletcher were assets to CUC and the CNMI.

"When [Malae] left, Mr. Fletcher picked up where Abe left off, carried the ball and continued great relations with the feds," Sablan said in an interview at his office.

He said Saipan is nearing 100 percent 24/7 water, and effectively managed millions of dollars of federal grants under Malae and Fletcher's leadership.

CUC is under the governor's control, since there remains no board of directors and the agency has been placed under a state of emergency.

The House impeached Fitial on 18 charges of corruption, felony, and neglect of duty last week. He is now facing a trial at the Senate. He is the first governor in the CNMI and any U.S. territory to be impeached.

Judge orders 2 lawyers to explain why they should not be sanctioned

Superior Court Associate Judge Joseph N. Camacho has ordered two lawyers representing former governor Pedro P. Tenorio and his wife Sophia Tenorio in a lawsuit against the owner of the defunct Hotel Riviera Saipan to appear in court and explain why they should not be sanctioned over the filing of separate documents within a 24-hour period.

In an order issued Friday, Camacho directed attorneys Daniel Stafford and Tiberius Mocanu to appear in court tomorrow, Tuesday, at 9am, to show cause why the court should not impose sanctions.

The judge warned that failure to appear may result in a bench warrant being issued and other sanctions.

"This court is very concerned whether these two attorneys for the plaintiffs know what they are doing or are simply playing games," Camacho said.

According to court documents, on Thursday, Feb. 14, at 11:24am, Stafford, counsel for the Tenorio couple, filed a motion for preliminary injunctive relief and requested for an expedited hearing.

Stafford asked the court issue an order prohibiting Chang Shin Resort Saipan Corp., owner of Hotel Riviera Saipan, from leaving the hotel premises unsecured, and directing the corporation not to take any action that would damage the property.

In the alternative, Stafford asked the court to allow the Tenorio couple access to the property and allow their agents to secure and maintain the property.

Later that day, at 4:07pm, Stafford filed a notice to withdraw the motion.

The following day, Feb. 15, at 10:59am, attorney Tiberius Mocanu filed a notice to substitute Stafford as counsel for the Tenorios, saying Stafford will be relocating off-island this month. Mocanu said the plaintiffs have consented to this substitution.

Later that day, at 3:03pm, Mocanu filed the same plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunctive relief that Stafford asked a day before to be withdrawn.

In his order to show cause on Friday, Camacho noted that all of the filings happened within a 24-hour period. (Ferdie de la Torre)

Healthcare Corp. to conduct survey on CEO's leadership

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

CEO Juan N. Babauta's continued stay at the helm of the Commonwealth Healthcare Corp. is now in the hands of employees of the CNMI's lone public hospital.

Board members on Friday decided to conduct an employees' survey to obtain personnel's input whether or not the board should terminate or retain Babauta's services.

The survey will be conducted at the Commonwealth Health Center and Tinian and Rota health centers simultaneously.

Babauta's $96,000 annual contract is set to expire on July 9.

Board chair Joaquin Torres said it's high time to assess how the CEO has performed since the corporation took over the former Department of Public Health in 2011.

Whether Babauta has been an effective leader or not lies with what the personnel will say on the "confidential" survey forms, said Torres.

Torres appointed board vice chair Pete Dela Cruz to head the committee for the CEO's evaluation, with three directors as panel members: Roy Rios, Anthony Aguon, and Anthony Raho.

Based on the one-page survey, Babauta will be rated by corporation employees on areas that include whether he established good rapport with staff, if he communicates with and works closely with the staff on matters of mutual concern, if the CEO establishes and implements with the medical staff an effective credentialing process, if he assists when appropriate with the development and revision of staff bylaws and related policies, and if he assists in determining community healthcare needs and in conjunction with the medical staff and assumes a leadership role in physician recruitment.

The survey forms must be completed and turned in no later than Feb. 28. Dela Cruz will man the survey on Rota while Aguon will take charge for the Tinian center.

Babauta may get the following ratings: outstanding, highly effective, effective, improvement needed, unacceptable, and not applicable.

Dela Cruz said the special committee will meet on March 5 to interview management officials and key corporation units for their input and to provide further guidance to the board.

On March 6, the full special panel will deliberate on the results of the survey and will make a recommendation for full board action the next day, March 7.

Torres, after Friday's board meeting, said the board will make a final decision on Babauta's contract, with Gov. Benigno R. Fitial making the final concurrence.

Babauta's contract will either be terminated, continued, or renewed for another year.

Dysfunctional

Torres admitted to being disappointed by all the revelations that surfaced during Friday's extended meeting.

Despite the arguments and disagreements, one thing that almost everyone agreed on is the "broken and dysfunctional" ted they lack.

"We can't put [together] a business plan...because we're still in the red," said Babauta, adding that although the CHCC has $3.6 million to pay for the principal amount of the MPLT loan, they cannot decide whether to pay it now due to emergencies that may happen at the hospital.

When asked what will it take to come up with a business plan, Babauta said the corporation would need to hire an expert to do the work. Due to funding constraints, hiring such a professional is not a priority for now.

management operation at the hospital.

Dr. Sharlene Osman, director for Medical Affairs, was vocal about her frustrations and disappointment over the lack of "linkage" between the administration and the hospital. The top management's failure to make decisions, she said, often puts the hospital in limbo.

Osman disclosed to the board that the management—whether it is human resources or whoever is responsible for recruitment—also sits on the applications of potential doctors and staff. Applicants' follow-up calls are not being answered, no response is issued, and no updates are given to the department that needs the staff, etc.

As a result, Osman said she was forced to turn to a Guam hospital for a critically needed physician last year. Her unit also needs a social worker, another position that has not been filled to date.

"It's not that people are not applying, but it's because the system here is broken," Osman said, adding that the potential applicant has submitted applications but has not been informed of anything by the corporation.

Management officials also expressed "confusion" as to who is responsible for staff recruitment.

Karen Buettner said she was surprised by expectations that she is responsible for hiring physicians and other hospital staff, being the hospital services director.

COO Esther Muña said that, although a recruitment and retention committee has been established, the panel's job is merely to recommend to the CEO.

"We're not the ones who need to pick up the phone and start the hiring. HR processed the papers. The committee only makes recommendations to the CEO," explained Muña.

The board later learned that the corporation's HR manager quit last year and has not been replaced. The acting HR manager, who was not present at the meeting, received most of the blame.

Vice chair Pete Dela Cruz recommended to the CEO to take immediate action on the HR situation, saying the unit's flaws are gravely impacting the entire operation.

"What we have here is an assembly line that is broken and not working," lamented Dela Cruz.

Board member Anthony Raho described as "horrible" the "lack of information" coming out from the CEO's office regarding matters like the pending loan request with the Marianas Public Land Trust, information that needs to be shared with the staff, and information that needs to be reported to the board.

Meantime, Buettner disclosed "overlapping and conflicts" of some jobs at the corporation, which she said is impacting operation.

When asked by Raho if she is getting the proper direction to effectively do her job as hospital director, Buettner did not respond.

Osman said that CHC is still providing way below the minimum standard care.

She believes the corporation has a lot to fix—both in the operational side and management side of the organization—before it can achieve the desired level of healthcare service. Among these is the "critical staffing" that CHC needs.

Modification of MPLT, CHC loan agreement eyed

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
REPORTER

Commonwealth Healthcare Corp. CEO Juan N. Babauta disclosed Friday that he wants the loan agreement between the hospital and the Marianas Public Land Trust modified, a proposal that he said will be on the trustees' table for a decision soon.

The corporation was approved early last year a $4.58 million line of credit with MPLT and the principal amount is maturing next month. Included in this loan is the $1.58 million for the electronic health record project, which may be granted federal reimbursement once it proves meaningful use of the system.

Babauta disclosed that a letter was sent to MPLT requesting a traditional line of credit for the hospital, which means a continuation of drawing the $4.58 million until March 2017.

He said the modification of the terms of the loan agreement will reflect a requirement for interest to be paid in accordance with the current loan, but would allow CHCC to repay the principal amount at any time with the balance of the loan due in 2017.

The hospital, he added, would pledge as payment and security any proceeds of a sumptuary tax to pay down the balance of the line of credit with a minimum of 50 percent of the proceed amount. Drawdown was requested with minimum increments of $100,000 in accordance with the terms of the current line of credit.

Babauta reported that his team met on Jan. 18 with the chairman of the MPLT board, which he said remains willing to help the hospital.

"Pursuant to our meeting with MPLT [on Jan. 18], yes, it's still on the table," responded Babauta when asked by board member Anthony Raho about MPLT's willingness to accommodate the loan.

Raho cited a December letter by MPLT to CHCC which stated in strong language that it will not accommodate the further proposals unless all requirements they asked for are satisfied by the corporation.

One of the major requirements of MPLT, according to Babauta, is the organization's business plan, which he admit-

No guns at home, so Japanese shoot 'em up in Guam

By ERIC TALMADGE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

TAMUNING, Guam (AP)—Their well-equipped arsenals offer everything from tiny revolvers (for ladies) to Berettas, Glocks, semi-automatic pistols and M16 military assault rifles. If kids can see over the counter, they are welcome too.

Forget the white sandy beaches, coral reefs and laid-back island culture. For many tourists from Japan, the biggest thrill is the chance to shoot a gun at one of Guam's ubiquitous ranges, dozens of which are tucked between upscale shopping centers.

The U.S. territory of Guam—a tropical island often described as a cheaper version of Hawaii—has long been the perfect place to put guns in the hands of tourists, especially from Japan, where gun ownership is tightly restricted and handguns are banned.

Despite a shared sense of shock over the recent rampage by a gunman at America's Sandy Hook Elementary School, the gun tourism business here is as brisk as ever.

"It was such a feeling of power," Keigo Takizawa, a 30-year-old Japanese actor, said after blasting holes in a paper target with a shotgun, a .44 magnum and a Smith & Wesson revolver at the Western Frontier Village gun club, a cowboy-themed indoor shooting range and gift shop on Guam's main shopping street.

"But," he said, "I still don't think anyone should be allowed to have one of their own."

Many Japanese see America's gun

culture as both frightening and fascinating. Back home, the only people with handguns are in the military, the police or the mob.

Because guns are so hard to find, gun-related crime is extremely rare. They were used in only seven murders in Japan—a nation of about 130 million people—in 2011, the most recent year for official statistics. In the U.S., with 315 million people, there are more than 11,000 gun-related killings annually.

The Japanese are proud of their low crime rate and generally support tough gun-control policies.

But this Pacific island halfway between Tokyo and Honolulu is America. Guam's gun ranges are to the Japanese what Amsterdam's cannabis cafes are to backpackers from the world over.

"I think it's human nature to be curious about something that is forbidden," said Tetsuo Yamamoto, a Japanese native who emigrated to the United States 30 years ago and runs the Western Frontier Village range. "Most of our customers are from Japan and have never had the opportunity to shoot a gun. It's very exotic for them, and it's very exhilarating."

So exhilarating that he sometimes asks his guests to stay around for a while to calm down after they've finished shooting.

Many other tourists—from South Korea, Taiwan and increasingly

The governor, 68, now faces trial at the nine-member Senate where at least six affirmative votes on at least one of the 18 charges are needed to convict and remove him.

However, because Sen. Juan Ayuyu (Ind-Rota) remains in jail while awaiting trial for a charge related to smuggling of endangered fruit bats from Rota to Saipan, only eight of nine senators are expected to be at the trial.

These charges of felony, corruption, and neglect of duty are in connection with the unauthorized release of a federal inmate to give him a massage at his private residence in the wee hours of the morning in January 2010, as well as the signing of a sole-source $190.8-million power purchase agreement.

Fitial was also impeached on charges related to the award of a sole-source ARRA management contract worth almost $400,000, and for his failure to remove a former attorney general for violation of federal and local election laws, and conspiring with others to shield the same former AG, now a fugitive from justice, from being served a penal summons.

Fitial was also impeached for failure to timely appoint officials for Senate consideration including a Supreme Court justice, commissioners, and department heads, including the commissioners for DPS and secretary for DPW, which he nominated after the filing of the impeachment resolution.

House Speaker Joseph DeLeon Guerrero (IR-Saipan), the main author of the impeachment resolution and is expected to be among the "prosecutors" at the trial, said it is going to be an uphill battle at the Senate but the House will prepare vigorously and meticulously.

Russia—are less impressed. All South Korean men, for example, learn how to shoot during mandatory military service.

"To them, learning how to use a gun was a chore," said Patrick Chon, general manager of the Hafa Adai indoor shooting range. "It brings back bad memories. They hardly ever come here."

Visitors to his range are greeted by movie posters for "The Terminator" and "Die Hard," with their iconic, gun-toting action heroes. The Hollywood shoot-'em-up image is a common motif at many ranges, playing into an image of America that many Asians share.

"When most Japanese people think of American culture, one of the first things they think of is guns," said Nat-sue Matsumoto, a 38-year-old Osaka woman who said she enjoyed shooting so much she was back at a range for the second time in three days. "American movies and video games are full of guns and that's appealing, in a frightening sort of way."

"But I think Japan has it right," she added. "If you don't have a gun, you can't kill someone with it."

website, earhartonsaipan.com.

For the group, or at least for Harris who found the first sonar in the Titanic, the Earhart project has been a 30-year journey and counting.

The public is encouraged to help in this project by providing information about Earhart's supposed presence on Saipan in 1937 and onwards.

During this trip, they said they have received help from multi-awarded businessman David Sablan Sr., Gov. Benigno R. Fitial, and other residents, including those who provided testimony to them claiming they saw Earhart.

The story about Saipan as Earhart's final resting place has been in circulation for decades. In 1966, for example, CBS correspondent Fred Goerner published a book claiming Earhart and Noonan were captured and executed when their aircraft crashed on Saipan while it was still under Japanese occupation.

Buettner said other units currently at "dangerous staffing levels" include internal medicine, which needs two more doctors; labor and delivery, which lack midwife coverage every shift; and anesthesiology, when its locum leaves in April.

Buettner also reported that the hospital's orthopedic surgeon resigned last Feb. 4.

Besides an additional biomed and social worker for the dialysis unit, Buettner said they also lack a registered dietician for Medicare compliance.

The repair and maintenance unit of the dialysis center also needs more people. It currently has only one.

Osman revealed that the unit's only biomed is also considering leaving due to his frozen salary for the last 20 years. "If he leaves, you will have no dialysis unit!" she told the board Friday.

As for the nursing department, nursing director Leticia Reyes told the corporation board that a total of 40 nurses resigned in 2012 due to uncertainties at the corporation.

As of December 2012, the department has 146 nurses after they successfully recruited 18 while 20 are pending. In January 2012, the department had 168 nurses.

from contacting senators, and vice versa, on matters related to the impeachment trial.

Fitial, president of the Republican Party, was initially expected to attend the Pika Festival on Tinian during the weekend, but officials said yesterday that they did not see the governor on the island.

Senators said the trial will be aired live on MCV's Channel 60 or 14.

Governor's nominees

Senators, at the same time, confirmed five of the governor's nominees during its Friday session on Tinian, including Sgt. James Guerrero to serve as Department of Public Safety commissioner and Anthony A. Camacho as Department of Public Works secretary.

Also confirmed were the governor's nominations of Michaela U. Sanchez as a member of the Northern Marianas College Board of Regents representing Tinian, Martin B. Ada as a member of the Marianas Public Land Trust, and Arsene Borja as a member of the Civil Service Commission.

This is the first time since early 2012 that DPS will have a permanent commissioner.

The governor's failure to timely fill vacancies in government was among the articles of impeachment against him.

Executive session

After voting on the Committee on Executive Appointments and Government Investigations' separate reports recommending confirmation of the nominees, the senators went into an executive session at the Tinian courthouse to discuss a special committee's proposed impeachment rules.

When the senators emerged from the executive session, they voted on the impeachment trial rules that Senate Vice President Ralph Torres's (R-Saipan) special panel worked on for days. The 8-0 vote came in at past 6pm.

Besides Torres, the other special committee members that recommended the rules' passage were Sens. Pete Reyes (IR-Saipan), Jovita Taimanao (Ind-Rota), and Frank Cruz (R-Tinian).

Senators also agreed that the Senate president will be the only one to speak on behalf of the Senate regarding the Senate impeachment trial.

As of Sunday afternoon, however, the Senate has yet to release an official copy to Saipan Tribune of the impeachment rules that they adopted two days earlier.

The adopted rules are estimated to be 20 pages long.

Legal team

The Fitial administration also remains mum about the impeachment and the upcoming trial. The governor has not designated an acting press secretary; press secretary Angel Demapan is on leave for an off-island leadership training.

The administration also has yet to answer questions as to the composition of the governor's legal team, although there were unconfirmed reports that the governor has tapped lawyers from within and outside the CNMI.

By a vote of 16-4, the House impeached Fitial on almost all the 18 articles of impeachment on Feb. 11 and 12.

'$86K fees, expenses for 2 other lawyers reasonable'

» Judge says legal counsels' actions realized a savings of $5.1M for Fund

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE

REPORTER

U.S. District Court for the NMI designated judge Frances M. Tydingco-Gatewood has approved the payment of $86,469.11 in legal fees and expenses for the NMI Retirement Fund's two other lawyers for the months of October through December 2012.

In an order issued Thursday, Tydingco-Gatewood said she finds the grand total of $86,469.11 to be reasonable for the services of Daniel J. Berman and Braddock Huesman.

Berman's legal fees are $6,687; $11,902.50; and $24,500 for the months of October, November, and December 2012, respectively. He also sought payment of $1.90 and $810.21 as expenses for November and December respectively.

Huesman's legal fees are $14,418; $14,500; and $12,398 for the months of October, November, and December, respectively. He also asked for payment of $169 as expenses for December.

The payment of $86,469.11 is separate from the $17,783 and $12,507.06 in legal fees and expenses that the Fund's trustee ad litem, Law Offices of Civile & Tang and its representative Joseph C. Razzano, is seeking for the months of November and December 2012.

For the months of September and October 2012, Razzano and the Tang law firm were paid $60,949.83.

In her order Thursday, Tydingco-Gatewood directed acting Fund director Lilian Pangelinan to immediately remit $86,469.11 from the Fund's 2012 budget to the Fund's trustee ad litem as payment for the services of Berman and Huesman.

The judge reiterated her earlier position that the NMI government is ultimately responsible for reimbursing the Fund for these funds.

Tydingco-Gatewood noted that the Fund's trustee ad litem's request for compensation for the month of November 2012 was emailed to the court and not filed in Betty Johnson's court action.

She disclosed that during this time frame, the trustee ad litem's legal counsels successfully negotiated and executed renewal agreements for health and life insurance for government employees and retirees, and realized a savings of approximately $5.1 million for the CNMI government, employees, and retirees.

Tydingco-Gatewood added that the legal counsels have expended a great deal of time managing and advancing the many litigation matters that involve the Fund.

The Fund is involved in 14 separate lawsuits.

Tydingco-Gatewood said she recognizes that the Johnson court action has generated widespread interest among the people of the CNMI.

"In the interest of public transparency, the invoices of legal counsel should be made available to the public," she said.

However, the judge noted, the court must balance the public's interests with the need to preserve the confidential communications between attorney and client and prevent disclosure of attorney work product and litigation strategy.

Accordingly, Tydingco-Gatewood said, the trustee ad litem is directed to review the invoices and make appropriate redactions as necessary.

The redacted invoices, she said, shall be filed by the trustee ad litem no later than 30 days later.

Man gets 3 years in prison for sexual abuse of a minor

A 32-year-old man who was arrested last year with another man for having sex with a 14-year-old girl who later became pregnant was slapped with a three-year prison term.

In an order issued Friday, Superior Court Associate Judge David A. Wiseman sentenced Leon Joaquin Sanchez to 10 years in prison, all suspended except for three years, with credit for time served.

Sanchez will start serving his sentence on Feb. 27, 2013.

He pleaded guilty to sexual abuse of a minor in the second degree as part of the plea deal.

Wiseman said the victim had relations with several other men and a plea deal would avoid subjecting her and her family to the stress and trauma of a trial.

The judge said Sanchez had stated that he loves the girl, intends to marry her, and support her and the child.

After serving his sentence, Sanchez will be placed on probation for five years. He was required to register as a sex offender, perform 100 hours of community service, and pay a $200 fine, $100 court assessment fee, and $500 probation fee.

Upon the birth of the victim's child, Sanchez will be required to submit to a paternity test. If determined to be the father, he is responsible for restitution to the victim for the medical costs associated with labor and delivery.

In August 2012, Tinian police arrested Sanchez and Donald Cruz Arriola, 24, on allegations that they had sex with a 14-year-old girl who was then pregnant.

A detective stated in her report that the girl told a Division of Youth Services officer that she had sex with two men in the latter part of August 2012 and that one of them was Arriola.

The detective also disclosed that the girl confessed that Sanchez made her pregnant and that they have been having sex since late July 2012. (Ferdie de la Torre)

Judge Manglona sets again new date for Sen. Ayuyu's trial

2012 MCS top student makes dean's list

A student who graduated at the top of his class last school year has made it to the University of Washington's Dean's List for Autumn Quarter 2012.

The Quarterly Dean's List includes the names of students who have attained a quarterly GPA of 3.50 in the final grades for at least 12 graded credits.

Billie Ocampo is Mount Carmel School's valedictorian in 2012. His inclusion on the university's Dean's List will be included in his permanent academic record.

Ocampo was informed of the good news in a letter from the university's interim dean, Robert C. Stacey, who commended Ocampo for his outstanding scholarship and dedication to his studies.

Ocampo

Ocampo is the son of Marida Pensader, the operations support manager for DFS Saipan Limited, who said: "Apart from his perseverance, I believe MCS had prepared him well to succeed."

MCS president and Ocampo's former AP English teacher Galvin Deleon Guerrero was very happy to hear the good news. "Billie was always a diligent student with great writing skills, and we are very proud of his accomplishments." (Moneth G. Deposa)

U.S. District Court for the NMI Chief Judge Ramona V. Manglona has once again set a new trial date for Sen. Juan M. Ayuyu (R-Rota), who is facing two charges in an alleged conspiracy to bring eight dead Mariana fruit bats from Rota to Saipan.

In an order issued Friday, Manglona said that after the hearing last week, she discovered she has a scheduling conflict that will not permit trial to start on March 25, 2013.

Ayuyu's trial will now begin on April 1, 2013, at 9am.

"The delay between March 25 and April 1, 2013, is not excludable under the Speedy Trial Act," the judge said.

On Feb. 8, the prosecution and Ayuyu agreed to continue the trial set for Feb. 19, 2013. The counsels informed the court that the defense needs additional time to prepare based on new discovery, including grand jury transcripts.

The counsels also disclosed that an off-island U.S. government witness is unavailable in February because he has to care for his wife, who is recovering from surgery.

Manglona said Wednesday that because of these factors, the "ends of justice served by granting a continuance outweighed the best interest of the public and the defendant in a speedy trial." The judge then reset trial to begin on March 25, 2013, but then later discovered the court's scheduling conflict.

The first indictment charged Ayuyu and Ryan James Inos Manglona with conspiracy to violate the Endangered Species Act and Lacey Act, one count of violating the Endangered Species Act, and one count of violating the Lacey Act.

The indictment alleged that on Oct. 17, 2010, Ayuyu and Ryan Manglona conspired to conceal eight dead Mariana fruit bats (Pteropus mariannus mariannus) underneath 40 lbs of lemons inside a cardboard box and to attempt to transport the box to Saipan on a Freedom Air flight.

A separate indictment was returned charging Ryan Manglona with three counts of lying to a grand jury and one count of obstructing justice.

A second indictment charged Ayuyu with conspiring to obstruct an official proceeding, obstructing an official proceeding, tampering with a witness, suborning perjury, attempting to prevent testimony of a witness, obstructing the due administration of justice, and attempting to destroy or remove seized property.

The two cases will be tried jointly.

Ryan Manglona worked for the Rota Mayor's Office and was also assigned to perform duties on behalf of the Rota Legislative Delegation. He subsequently pleaded guilty to obstruction of justice.

Ayuyu, 48, pleaded not guilty to all charges. (Ferdie de la Torre)

EMO warns of rough seas

A large swell and wind waves from the north and especially from the east will cause hazardous surf in the Marianas for the next several days, according to the Emergency Management Office yesterday.

EMO said that high surf and small craft advisories will be in effect until 6pm Wednesday.

A small craft advisory means that seas 10 feet or greater and sustained winds of 22 to 33 knots are expected to produce conditions hazardous to small craft.

"Along north facing reefs, expect hazardous surf of 7 to 10 feet for the next couple of days. Locally higher surf up to 12 feet is possible at some locations. Along east facing reefs, hazardous surf of 9 to 12 could build to 12 to 14 feet on Monday and Tuesday. Surf should gradually subside by Thursday," the EMO advisory states.

Northeast winds of 15 to 25 knots will increase to 20 to 30 knots on Monday. Combines seas will gradually build to around 12 feet on Monday.

Inexperienced mariners, especially those operating smaller vessels, should avoid boating in these conditions. If travel by boat is necessary exercise caution, especially near reef lines and when entering or leaving harbors and inlets.

The public is advised to avoid venturing near exposed reefs and beaches, especially those along north and east facing reefs as rip currents are life threatening. (EMO)

Commonwealth Utilities Corporation Office of the Executive Director

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS CUC-RFP-13-015

SUPPLY & DELIVERY OF FUEL FOR POWER GENERATION

The Office of the Executive Director for the Commonwealth Utilities Corporation (CUC) is soliciting competitive sealed proposals from qualified firms for the supply and delivery of fuel for CUC Power Generation facilities on Saipan, Tinian, and Rota. The purchase of approximately 18,000,000 – 20,000,000 US gallons annually of No. 2 Diesel Fuel Oil (also known as gasoil or Low Sulfur ADO for American Samoa and CNMI, as defined by US EPA) will be for the period starting May 1, 2013 through April 30, 2017.

The RFP package may be obtained upon receipt of a non-refundable deposit from the CUC Treasury Section, by cash, check or credit card in the amount of $200.00 for one set from the CUC Procurement and Supply Office, 3rd Floor, Room 3, Joeten Dandan Commercial Building, Saipan, between 7:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. to 4:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, except on government observed holidays.

A Pre-Proposal Conference will be held on February 19, 2013 at 10:00 AM (ChST) at the CUC Main Conference Room, 3rd Floor, Room 15, Joeten Dandan Commercial Building, Dandan, Saipan.

One (1) original and Five (5) copies must be submitted in a sealed envelope marked "CUC-RFP-13-015, Supply & Delivery of Fuel for Power Generation," to the CUC Procurement & Supply Office, 3rd Floor, Room No. 3, Joeten Dandan Commercial Building, P.O. Box 501220, Saipan, MP 96950, no later than March 08, 2013 at 10:00 AM (ChST). Late submissions and conditional offers will not be considered.

All Offerors are advised that CUC assumes no responsibility in any act of omission on the part of the Offeror due to lack of information or understanding of the proposal requirements in the course of Contractor's preparation of a proposal or supply under the contract. The Proposal Price shall remain the same throughout the term of the contract except for the variation in the MOPS and government taxes, duties and fees. Note that the CNMI Government at present, exempts the fuel supplier from paying liquid fuel tax (currently, $0.15/gallon).

Discussions may be conducted with responsible proposers for the purpose of clarification and to ensure full understanding of, and responsiveness to solicitation requirements. Proposers shall be accorded fair and equal treatment. There shall be no disclosure of any information derived from proposals submitted by competing proposers.

This Request for Proposal does not commit CUC to the award of a contract or contracts, nor to pay any cost incurred in the preparation and submission of proposals in anticipation of a contract. This bid and the ensuing contract shall be executed pursuant to the CUC Procurement Regulations. The contractor shall be required to comply with all CNMI and applicable Federal Laws.

All questions or request for clarification must be submitted in writing no later than February 22, 2013 at 10:00 AM (ChST) to Manny B. Sablan, Jr., CUC Purchasing Officer, via email address manny.sablan@cucgov.org with a copy to Wallon Young, CUC Deputy Director for Power via email wallon59@yahoo.com and Charles Warren, CUC Chief Financial Officer via email charles\_warren@cucgov.org.

CUC reserves the right to reject any or all proposals for any reason and to waive any defects in said proposal, if in its sole opinion, to do so would be in the best interest of CUC. All proposals shall become the property of CUC.

Kilili: US Senate VAWA doubles CNMI funding

Delegate Gregorio Kilili C. Sablan (Ind-MP) says he welcomes Senate passage last week of the reauthorization of the Violence Against Women Act. The bill doubles funding allocated to the Northern Mariana Islands for the Sexual Assault Service Program and contains several other provisions of specific benefit to women in the Northern Mariana Islands. The Senate passed the VAWA reauthorization in the last Congress also, but the Republican House refused to take action on the bill. Overall, the VAWA reauthorization significantly strengthens the ability of federal and local law enforcement and service providers to combat domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking. The Senate passed its bill, S. 47, on Tuesday with a bipartisan vote of 78 to 22.

Sablan is an original co-sponsor of the same bill, H.R. 11, in the House.

"Increasing the funding for service providers in the Northern Marianas who help survivors of sexual assault has been my goal for some time," the congressman explained. "In the last Congress I introduced H.R. 4195 for that one purpose; and I worked to have the funding increase included in the larger bills, H.R. 11 and S. 47, in this Congress."

In addition to the increased allocation for the Sexual Assault Service Program, the Senate bill and its House companion reauthorize STOP and Transitional Housing Assistance grants that the Northern Mariana Islands also receives.

"Providing these services is truly a pressing need," said Sablan. "The national statistics are horrifying: one in six women will experience an attempted or completed rape at some time in her life; and most of those women will be younger than age 18."

"As many in six in 10 victims are assaulted by a partner, relative, friend, or acquaintance, which makes it even more important to provide safe havens in our community."

Sablan has been working on these issues since he was first elected to Congress with the help of local advocates, such as the Northern Marianas Coalition Against Domestic and Sexual Violence. "The Coalition and executive director Maisie B. Tenorio have been great partners, letting me know what is needed to help individuals and families caught up in domestic and sexual violence."

"I think we can all be proud of the strides our community has made in confronting this problem—though we all know there is much, much more work still to do."

"Improving the flow of federal funding will remain part of our effort," Sablan promised.

The VAWA reauthorization passed by the Senate also makes a technical amendment to the Consolidated Natural Resources Act, which extended federal management of immigration to the Northern Marianas. Women who petition for status as victims of human trafficking or violence will be allowed to count the time lived in the Northern Marianas prior to the CNRA going into effect as time present in the United States. This will allow these women to more quickly adjust to a permanent immigrant status. (PR)

Rota Nat'l Park bill re-introduced

Delegate Gregorio Kilili C. Sablan (Ind-MP) has re-introduced a bill authorizing study of areas of Rota for designation as a National Park. The Rota Cultural and Natural Resources Study Act has already passed the U.S. House of Representatives twice, once in the 111th and once in the 112th Congresses.

"Rota has archaeological, historical, and natural resources that are of national significance," Sablan said. "That was the finding of the National Parks Service reconnaissance team in 2005. And many of these resources are not found anywhere in the National Parks system. That means Rota deserves a more detailed 'feasibility and suitability' study, which my bill authorizes. If the Parks Service finds that there are places on Rota that fit those criteria, then we could see a Rota National Park in the future."

Despite strong support in the House, the Rota Park study bill has not passed the Senate.

But both the new chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources, Oregon Democrat Ron Wyden, and his Republican counterpart on the Committee, Lisa Murkowski of Alaska, have expressed determination to do better in this Congress. One plan is to move several small packages of bills, instead of trying to bundle lots of legislation in one large measure at the end of this Congress.

In his introductory statement on the bill, Sablan said that one reason people on Rota support further study of the possibility of a national park is the potential economic benefit. "The economy of Rota, which could be developed around themes of eco-tourism, needs a high value destination that park designation would provide," Sablan explained. "The unique features of Rota could draw visitors from far and wide."

One such feature is ancient Chamorro sites that are particularly well-preserved on the island. "Remnants of their ancient settlements are found at several locations and include the iconic latte stone houses. These consist of two parallel rows of limestone columns with each column supporting a hemispherical capstone upon which a wooden framed house was placed," Sablan said.

"A quarry for these columns and capstones is also among the archaeologically important sites that could eventually be part of a Rota National Park."

Another resource of national and international significance on Rota is the endangered Mariana crow, the Aga, and the native limestone forests that provide habitat for the bird. "This rare species is protected under both local and federal laws," Sablan said. "And its future could be further assured if areas of its already limited range were incorporated into a park." (PR)

Bids will be required to be submitted under a condition of irrevocability for a period of 60 days after submission. Late submissions and conditional bids will not be considered.

A mandatory pre-bid conference followed by a site visit is scheduled for January 31, 2013 at 10:00 AM (ChST) at the CUC Main Conference Room, 3rd Floor, Joeten Dandan Commercial Building in Saipan, to ensure prospective bidders are fully aware of the work involved and familiarize with the site conditions.

CUC will award a contract to more than one firm for said services, based on bids for "Service Section" pursuant to Scope-of-Work.

Bidders are advised that CUC assumes no responsibility in any act of omission on the part of the bidder due to lack of information or understanding of the site conditions in the course of bidder's preparation of a bid or performance of work under the contract. The IFB does not commit CUC to award a contract, to pay any cost incurred in the preparation of the bid under this request, or to procure or contract for services.

Bidders are required to comply with all CNMI and applicable Federal Laws. This bid and the ensuing contract shall be executed as per the CUC Procurement Regulations. CUC reserves the right to reject any or all bids and waive any imperfection in the bid proposal in the interest of the government. All bids shall become the property of CUC.

Benedict leaves stage with dignity

By SUSAN REIMER

The Baltimore Sun

Susan Reimer is a columnist for the Baltimore Sun. Readers may send her email at susan.reimer@baltsun.com.

You have to wonder what kind of fun Vatican mystery writer Dan Brown would have with the startling resignation of Pope Benedict XVI.

As would be the case when any well-known CEO suddenly steps down “for health reasons,” we are immediately suspicious.

Was he, like the last pope to step down voluntarily more than 600 years ago, simply the wrong man for the job? A shy and aging scholar overwhelmed by the demands of guiding the church through the scandals of sex abuse and money laundering, who was happier in the library than on the balcony at St. Peter’s?

Or was there some dark conspiracy to put him in place just long enough for another prince of the church to be maneuvered into the role?

Or perhaps he is just a humble and decent man who had the grace to step aside when he became too old and ill to do the job properly?

I’d like to believe that is the case. That Pope Benedict has set an example for popes and others in power who stay too long at the fair: judges, senators, athletes. Those who keep a firm grip on the power and the glory instead of yielding to the inevitability of time.

Many of us thought pope was a job you stayed in until God decided on a change in leadership.

Certainly that was the example Pope John Paul II set. Terribly ill and crippled by Parkinson’s, we watched him fade and die. But he saw his public suffering as testimony to his faith and devotion to the church, not as a hindrance to his job performance.

Pope Benedict was a reluctant inheritor of St. Peter’s keys to begin with. He said he prayed during the conclave nine years ago that he not be chosen. He looked forward to a quiet retirement in his native Bavaria, where he would pray and write.

He will get a chance at the contemplative life now. A monastery is being refurbished at the Vatican where he will live in seclusion. But he is not simply quitting a job he never wanted in the first place.

He told an interviewer that a pope should never quit just because the job got to be too difficult. He should never flee controversy and leave it for the next guy to resolve. Instead, he said that the leader of the faith must be mindful when he can no longer call on body and spirit to help him bear the burdens of his office.

We need to recognize the example he is setting—not just as pope but as a man aging in office. No one knows better than we, ourselves, what it takes to do the jobs we do. He had the clarity of vision to see himself as he truly was, and the humility to admit he no longer had the strength or the desire to do what it takes.

Resignation or retirement are difficult transitions to manage from the inside.

Nobody asked Hillary Clinton to leave her post as secretary of state. In fact, I am pretty sure the president would have been glad for her to stay. But she was burned out and exhausted, and she stepped aside.

No one wanted Cal Ripken to retire, either. Even those who saw his skills erode with age would have wished to still watch him play. But he left the Orioles under his own speed. Barry Sanders left the Detroit Lions just shy of all-time rushing records, but he said his

Irresponsibility in the CNMI

The major role of a government is responsibility to its people. The government’s role is to fulfill the needs of its citizens in matters that it cannot do on an individual basis.

Thus we need the assistance of a government elected by us. For example, we need protection from people in our community who will use various means to achieve their objectives at our expense. We have people who will harm us, steal from us, cheat us, and lie to us. To protect us the government establishes a police department.

We need electric power for our homes and businesses. Again it becomes the responsibility of the government to create either a privately owned and operated utility company or one operated by the government. It is the government’s responsibility again. This also includes waste management, medical care, and any other needs. Luckily we have the United States government who offers us protection from countries hostile to us.

Simply put, we elect officials who promise us that they are willing to assume the required and needed responsibilities to create a better community for us. However, when these promised responsibilities are shunned and used to further one’s personal agenda, we must rebel and oust that individual. Thus we find ourselves in such a situation now. We are impeaching our governor who has promised much to us but has delivered only to his personal needs.

Over the years our needs have been sadly neglected and even deteriorated. I am not saying that the governor has caused all our problems. Certainly he has inherited many of them. But his major crime is his attitude to solving them. We have been repeatedly informed what these acts of irresponsibility are. There are 18 of them. They have carefully been reviewed by the House of Representatives who overwhelmingly voted that they are in fact accurate. Now these 18 acts of irresponsibility have been forwarded to the Senate for their final review and action. Should they also agree that what the House examined is true, then the governor will be impeached.

I feel that the governor has not been honest with us. He has constantly neglected to explain to the Legislature many of his actions. In fact he has openly feuded with some of them when they complained about his personal decisions. When he has felt threatened, he quickly declared “emergency powers.” These mean that he is the only one that can handle the situation.

For example, if the deal with the power plant was such a good one for the community, why did he keep it so secretive? Had he been honest and truly responsible, he would have included the Legislature and us in the discussions. Finally all the fraud has been discovered. Instead of taking blame, he now points his finger at the then attorney general, who had to run away thereby becoming a fugitive from justice. Doesn’t he know that whenever one points a finger at an accused, three or four fingers point back at the accuser?

Instead of getting involved with improving our medical facilities, he runs off to the United States or to the Philippines for his treatments. Is this what a responsible governor who has the power and authority to remedy the situation does? Was there nothing he could have done by personal intervention? I feel that, with a strong desire and effort to rehabilitate our hospital from the governor, it could be improved.

I am not suggesting that the governor could have solved all the problems that beset us. But he could have cooperated better with the federal government, the Legislature, and us. I notice on the highways a sign that states: “Asking for help is not a sign of weakness.” But it takes a man with courage and with a deep sense of responsibility.

Having been a part of the government including former speaker of the House for many years, the governor was part of the problems and part of any solutions. He has always known what his predecessors have done or not done to remedy the problems before the community. In fact isn’t his campaign rhetoric full of promises and pledges of responsibility?

The saddest part of all this is that the governor has preferred to recluse himself from the community. He rarely has given public speeches to explain what he has done or the problems he faces. I feel that if he had only become a part of the community and discussed our needs and fears, we would have understood better any of his failures. But no! He has been above all of this. It is as though our father didn’t care for us, except for only his aggrandizement.

Now that his neck is in the noose, he is saying he has done no wrong. But the vast majority of us have removed the veil over eyes which he so cleverly tried to place over them. We showed that insight and courage only a few months ago in the last election when we booted out most of his followers. We knew we needed a change.

We need a man who loves us as a father does his children. As a good father works long and hard to provide for his children, our governor must also do so. If not what good is he?

Let us pray that the new leadership will learn from the governor’s mistakes and guide us to a better Commonwealth. We cannot undo the wrongs done to us, but we forge ahead with a determination and strength that will eventually cure most of our ills. The assistance is there. Diamonds are under our feet. Let us bend down and dig them up!

In conclusion, the CNMI is a great country and full of beautiful and good people. We need leaders for the people and by the people! Let us strive to regain our pride and dignity not only to our benefactor the United States and to the world but to ourselves. This is our hour of tribulation. How we deal with it will prove to everybody what kind of people we are. Viva the CNMI!

The humanity of US Presidents

It is Presidents' Day. Top ten on a survey list: 1) Abe Lincoln abolished slavery, 2) FDR got working America back on its heels, 3) George Washington created a citizen president, 4) Thomas Jefferson doubled U.S. size with Louisiana purchase, 5) common man Andrew Jackson proved humble beginnings hinders no one, 6) trust buster TR vs. corrupt business, also committed deeply to conservation, 7) Woodrow Wilson led America out of isolation, 8) Harry Truman made hard decisions including the use of the A-bomb, 9) James K. Polk acquired CA, NM, OR, as manifest destiny, and 10) Ike Eisenhower presided over America's post-WWII economic prosperity.

In the topography of consciousness, we delineate three sides of the same reality. One is the social process perspective that engages economic support of human existence, the political organization of decision-making, the cultural significance and meaning of every human endeavor, and to balance the process that impacts and determines actions and deeds.

Science of late has been pushing the second perspective, a planetary one that zeroes in on ecological state and well being of the earth, metaphorically rendered as the global brain in Gaia's journey. Since the blue orb created the celebrated image of the earthrise, this perspective has gained common currency.

For example, groups of Christian faithful are engaged this Lent season in carbon fast, a conscious curtailing of carbon emission by prudent individual practices. With an Easter resurrection theme, measures like collaboratively planting trees are undertaken to create natural carbon-catching processes. In our own thinking, we refer to the social and planetary part of the trichotomy as eco-democracy.

The third category is the human, a 10,000-year journey in the backdrop of a 4.5-billion-year-old evolving planet, where the sense, feelings, thoughts, and resolve of a unit of consciousness has en-

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A better government

Dear Legislature: As a legal resident of Saipan and a concerned citizen of the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, I am writing to let you know how I see the government for the past few years.

First of all, the impeachment of the governor that just happened recently. He has been charged with 18 counts of corruption, felony, and neglect. This is why this government is going down. The CNMI is supposed to have someone who can be trusted, not someone who is charged with multiple reasons. We need someone who can lead the CNMI into a better life. The prices of fuel, power, rental, food, water, etc. have been difficult to pay for those who are getting minimum wage rates only.

We live in a society where we must try to survive with the change within our government, where things have been far too expensive to get and we must work hard to get it. Some parents are struggling because of the government. They have kids they need to support and they are working hard but it's still not enough. Some parents don't have jobs just because they aren't U.S. citizens. How are we supposed to build the CNMI to make it better when all we do is just give the jobs to U.S. citizens and make others struggle? Is this what we call a good government?

We have schools in the CNMI that need to be fixed. I know for a fact that each school has this saying, "Drug-Free," which is a lie. There are drugs in schools and it's being passed everywhere. We need more parapro's to stop the violence and the drugs in our schools. I'm a student at MHS and I see a lot of people smoking, chewing, skipping school. I can't feel secure in school because of the smell in the restrooms and the betel-nut stains everywhere, which is just disgusting. I don't want to have my future kids go to this kind of school if the government plans to stay like this.

There are tourists coming to Saipan and some of them want to live here. We don't want to chase them away with all the drugs and violence around. Especially since tourists are the ones bringing money to the CNMI. We need more police officers who can actually do their job right. They've got to be quicker at getting to their destinations and they've got to stop chewing betel nut while on the job.

Teachers in the CNMI are good but whenever a teacher is sick, there are barely any substitutes. How are we supposed to learn and take over you guys one day when we don't have substitute teachers with the same subject being taught or ones who know multiple subjects?

In conclusion, the government needs to look at the main points because we students will be the future leaders of the CNMI and we'll be taking over you guys one day. We need to better our education, government, police force, etc. There are more out there that need to be fixed. I just listed the things that would start to make our government better.

Merit system

It is important to remind Mr. Andrew Orsini, executive director of the Civil Service Commission, that the Civil Service Commission should not have any jurisdiction whatsoever over excepted positions and employees. Public Law 17-80 corrected this anomaly in the inconsistent and contradicting merit system practices of the CNMI government that was the darling of past and present administration for spoils that were given jobs as gifts for their patronage. If Mr. Orsini does not have complete understanding of the merit system of employment, then it is manifesting itself in the way that he expresses a lack of understanding of public employment practices under merit system standards.

The Civil Service Commission as a quasi-judicial administering agency on employment matters within the CNMI government is an independent and impartial body that should administer the merit system for only graded (classified) employees and positions and dealing with appointing authorities covered by the merit system employment regulations. To suggest that the ungraded or excepted employees and positions should be accorded Civil Service Commission jurisdiction and protection is ill advised and not consistent with the merit principles, even with the pseudo-rationalization by Mr. Orsini. The real question and one that the Civil Service Commission should champion, however, is preventing any appointing authority from abusing and perpetuating unlawful excepted employment practices as a deliberate means of circumventing the merit system standards and principles of employment practices.

A merit system is a method of personnel management designed to promote the efficiency and economy of the workforce and the good of the public by providing for the selection and retention of employees, in-service promotional opportunities, and other related matters, on the basis of merit and fitness. These employment practices follow stringent and proven merit principles that have been the guiding and sanctioning principles for appointing authorities in government circles since the death of President Garfield in 1883.

A new tradition

As we recognize a great leader and statesman, the late Mayor Juan B. Tudela, we look back at the accomplishments and the many attributes we associate with Mr. Tudela. I remember him as a teacher, a congressman, and also as our great mayor. He raised accomplished children and was enraptured with the wife of his youth. What wonderful examples he has set, not just for his family but also to our great CNMI.

Despite the abolition of the provisions for "State Funerals," one was still given to honor the late Mayor Juan B. Tudela, complete with a 15-gun salute, honor guards, and playing "Taps." The chairman of the Saipan and Northern Mariana Island Municipal Council, Ramon "RB" Camacho, came up with the idea for a new kind of memorial service that will honor fallen elected leaders of our community at the municipal level, the "Municipal Memorial Service." The late Mayor Juan B. Tudela was the first one honored with this Municipal Memorial Service—a new tradition.

tered the discourse of history, sociology, and psychology.

Enuff of the theoretics! Tuesday evening in America, President Barack Obama delivered SOTU 2013. How human is our President? He began with a JFK quote: "the Constitution makes us not rivals for power, but partners for progress... It is my task to report the state of the union. To improve it is the task of us all."

The president who spent most of his first term dealing with a recalcitrant and gridlocked Congress, he continued on a forceful and consistent "Yes, we can" theme.

In a literary cadence now familiar to many, he declared: It is our generation's task, then, to reignite the true engine of America's economic growth: a rising, thriving middle class.

It is—it is our unfinished task to restore the basic bargain that built this country, the idea that if you work hard and meet your responsibilities, you can get ahead, no matter where you come from, no matter what you look like or who you love.

It is our unfinished task to make sure that this government works on behalf of the many, and not just the few, that it encourages free enterprise, rewards individual initiative, and opens the doors of opportunity to every child across this great nation.

Then in a facilitative as well as prescriptive leadership style that excites many, and infuriates not a few, he romped with a Fix-it-First program on public works, a slew of advances on deficit reduction and tax reform, the need for urgent immigration measures and the revitalization of the middle class, early learning and technical-vocational education, gun legislation and private sector collaboration, the paycheck and women's rights, et al. Coming from nowhere, he hit a well aimed surprise homerun with an invitation for Congress to raise the minimum wage to $9 from its current level of $7.25. (I imagined some tremor from weaker knees in the Marianas Trench!)

He touched on a wide range of issues including extremist groups (al-Qaida) and counterterrorism, the end of U.S. presence in Afghanistan (though he failed to mention, in our view, a grave moral contradiction, the use of the drone), reduction of nuclear arsenals (Russia), inhibiting others from gaining one (Iran), and preparing for those who threaten to use one (the hermit kingdom of DPRK).

The adrenalin flow of the night was, however, the highlighted presence of many folks mentioned in the speech, including those victimized by gun violence, not the least of whom was one of the audience's former member, assassination survivor Gabrielle Gifford of Arizona. Obama did not push for a particular legislation; only that legislation already in docket deserves a vote. On the note, the SOTU almost turned into a participative rock festival!

Now's the time to do it. Now's the time to get it done, he thundered again and again. The speech is a tour de force, at once presidential and impassioned, a confident human resolve of imaginative proportions. We are partisan on record on this one. But it is not that the President is human. It is that we are invited to be human in the same vein.

heart just wasn't in it anymore.

Queen Elizabeth has been on the British throne for 60 years and believes that death is her only out. Meanwhile, the Netherlands' Queen Beatrix, who just turned 75, abdicated, saying it was time for a new generation.

Indeed, only one U.S. Supreme Court justice—William Rehnquist—has died in office in the last half-century. Seventeen others have chosen to retire. Twenty-one U.S. senators are 70 or older. And 10 senators, if we elected presidents the way the Vatican elects popes, wouldn't be eligible to vote in 2016 because they would be 80 or older.

I am certain the Catholic Church would not like to see popes resign at the first sign of trouble or after some kind of no-confidence vote among the faithful. But Pope Benedict has provided future popes (and perhaps some others) an example of how to leave the stage gracefully and honestly.

Budget cut warnings may prove harsher than reality

WASHINGTON (AP)—Get ready for two weeks of intensifying warnings about how crucial, popular government services are about to wither. Many of the threats could come true.

President Barack Obama and congressional Republicans made no progress this past week in heading off $85 billion in budget-wide cuts that automatically start taking effect March 1.

Lacking a bipartisan deal to avoid them and hoping to heap blame and pressure on GOP lawmakers, the administration is offering vivid details about the cuts' consequences: trimmed defense contracts, less secure U.S. embassies, furloughed air traffic controllers.

Past administrations have seldom hesitated to spotlight how budget standoffs would wilt programs the public values.

When a budget fight between President Bill Clinton and congressional Republicans led to two government shutdowns, in 1995 and 1996, some threats came true, like padlocked national parks.

Others did not.

Clinton warned that Medicare recipients might lose medical treatment, feeding programs for the low-income elderly could end and treatment at veterans' hospitals could be curtailed. All continued, thanks to contractors working for IOUs, local governments and charities stepping in and the budget impasse ending before serious damage occurred.

This time, at stake is not a federal shutdown but a range of automatic cuts. Between March 1 and Sept. 30, the remainder of the government's budget year, it would mean reductions of 13 percent for defense programs and 9 percent for other programs, according to the White House budget office.

The cuts, plus nearly $1 trillion more over the coming decade, were concocted two years ago. Administration and congressional bargainers purposely made them so painful that everyone would be forced to reach a grand deficit-cutting compromise to avoid them.

Hasn't happened.

A look at the cuts and the chilling impact the administration

Rep. Tom Price, R-Ga., a member of the House Budget Committee and Ways and Means Committee, center, joins House Speaker John Boehner of Ohio, right, and Rep. Susan Brooks, R-Ind., gestures during a news conference on Capitol Hill in Washington, Tuesday, Feb. 5, 2013, to demand for President Obama to submit a budget proposal to Congress.

says they would have, based on letters and testimony to Congress:

■ A key reminder: Social Security, Medicare and veterans' benefits, Medicaid and a host of other benefit programs are exempted. The cuts take effect over a seven-month period; they don't all crash ashore on March 1. If a bipartisan deal to ease them is reached, lawmakers could restore some or all the money retroactively.

■ On the other hand: Left in effect, these cuts are real even though their program-by-program impact is unclear. The law limits the administration's flexibility to protect favored initiatives, but the White House has told agencies to avoid cuts presenting "risks to life, safety or health" and to minimize harm to crucial services.

■ Defense: Troops at war would be protected, but there'd be fewer Air Force flying hours, less training for some Army units and cuts in naval forces. A $3 billion cut in the military's Tricare health care system could diminish elective care for military families and retirees. And, in a warning to the private defense industry, the Pentagon said it would be "restructuring contracts to reduce their scope and cost."

■ Health: The National Institutes of Health would lose $1.6 billion, trimming cancer research and drying up funds for hundreds of other research projects. Health departments would give 424,000 fewer tests for the AIDS virus. More than 373,000 people may not receive mental health services.

■ Food and agriculture: About 600,000 low-income pregnant women and new mothers would lose food aid and nutrition education. Meat inspectors could be furloughed up to 15 days, shutting meatpacking plants intermittently and costing up to $10 billion in production losses.

■ Homeland Security: Fewer border agents and facilities for detained illegal immigrants. Reduced Coast Guard air and sea operations, furloughed Secret Service agents and weakened efforts against cyberthreats to computer networks. The Federal Emergency Management Agency's disaster relief fund would lose more than $1 billion.

■ Education: Seventy thousand Head Start pupils would be removed from the prekindergarten program. Layoffs of 10,000 teachers and thousands of other staffers because of cuts in federal dollars that state and local governments use for schools. Cuts for programs for disabled and other special-needs students.

■ Transportation: Most of the Federal Aviation Administration's 47,000 employees would face furloughs, including air traffic controllers, for an average of 11 days.

■ Environment: Diminished Environmental Protection Agency monitoring of oil spills, air pollution and hazardous waste. The color-coded air quality forecasting system that keeps schoolchildren and others inside on bad-air days would be curtailed or eliminated. New models of cars and trucks could take longer to reach consumers because the EPA couldn't quickly validate that they meet emissions standards.

■ State Department: Slow security improvements at overseas facilities, cuts in economic aid in Afghanistan and malaria control in Africa.

■ Internal Revenue Service: Furloughed workers would reduce the IRS' ability to review returns, detect fraud and answer taxpayers' questions. It offered no specifics.

■ FBI: Furloughs and a hiring freeze would have the equivalent impact of cutting 2,285 employees, including 775 agents. Every FBI employee would be furloughed 14 workdays.

■ Interior Department: Hours and service would be trimmed at all 398 national parks, and up to 128 wildlife refuges could be shuttered. Oil, gas and coal development on public lands and offshore waters would be diminished because the agency would be less able to issue permits, conduct environmental reviews and inspect facilities.

■ Labor: More than 3.8 million people jobless for six months or longer could see their unemployment benefits reduced by as much as 9.4 percent. Thousands of veterans would lose job counseling. Fewer Occupational Safety and Health Administration inspectors could mean 1,200 fewer visits to work sites. One million fewer people would get help finding or preparing for new jobs.

■ NASA: Nearly $900 million in cuts, including funds to help private companies build capsules to send astronauts to the International Space Station.

■ Housing: The Department of Housing and Urban Development said about 125,000 poor households could lose benefits from the agency's Housing Choice Voucher program and risk becoming homeless.

BMW recalls nearly 570,000 cars to fix cables

DETROIT (AP)—BMW is recalling almost 570,000 cars in the U.S. and Canada because a battery cable connector can fail and cause the engines to stall.

The recall affects popular 3-Series sedans, wagons, convertibles and coupes from the 2007 through 2011 model years. Also included are 1-Series coupes and convertibles from 2008 through 2012, and the Z4 sports car from 2009 through 2011.

The cable connectors and a fuse box terminal in the cars can degrade over time, and that can break the electrical connection between the trunk-mounted battery and the fuse box at the front. If that happens, the cars could lose electrical power, causing the engines to stall unexpectedly, the U.S. National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said in documents posted on its website Saturday.

The company says in documents sent to NHTSA that the problem stems from movement between the battery cable and the fuse box.

BMW says it knows of one minor collision in Canada due to the problem, but no injuries.

The German automaker says dealers will replace the battery cable connector and secure it for free. It will start notifying owners in March.

The 3-Series is BMW's most popular car in the U.S., dominating the small luxury car market. The company sold nearly 100,000 of them in the U.S. last year.

The recall affects more than 504,000 cars in the U.S. and another 65,000 in Canada.

BMW, Toyota and other automakers have experienced large recalls in recent years because they use common parts on multiple models in order to save money.

Owners can call BMW with questions at (800) 525-7417.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

G20 finance chiefs in exchange rate pledge

MOSCOW (AP)—Finance chiefs from the world's 20 leading industrial and developing countries attempted Saturday to calm fears that governments are using foreign exchange as an economic weapon by pledging not to weaken their currencies to gain an advantage in global trade. The two-day meeting in Moscow ended Saturday with a joint communique that included a promise that the G20 members would "refrain from competitive devaluation" and "resist all forms of protectionism and keep our markets open." There has recently been widespread unease among investors and politicians over developments affecting the Japanese yen, which now trades near a three-year low. Japan is facing charges that it is trying first and foremost to lower the value of the yen to stimulate its economy and get the edge over other countries.

Spaniards protest against evictions

MADRID (AP)—Demonstrations were held across Spain on Saturday to protest harsh repossession laws that have led to hundreds of thousands of evictions during the country's deep recession. In Madrid—one of 50 cities where such protests were planned—thousands of people marched to demand that the government amend the laws. Demonstrations also took place in cities such as Barcelona, Pamplona, Valencia and Seville. More than 350,000 Spaniards have received eviction orders since 2008 because they were unable to make mortgage payments. Unemployment is at a staggering 26 percent, with young people the worst hit as Spain descends into a double-dip recession.

New report questions FAA's airline safety promise

WASHINGTON (AP)—Since a deadly airline crash in 2009, the government hasn't kept its promise to ensure that major airlines are holding their smaller partners to the same safety standards, a federal watchdog says.

The Transportation Department's inspector general faults the Federal Aviation Administration for not taking steps to encourage the big airlines "to consistently share safety information and best practices" with regional airlines that operate flights under contract for them.

That business link is known as code-sharing, by which one airline sells tickets for seats on a flight operated by another airline—United and United Express, for example.

More than half of all airline flights in the U.S. are operated by regional airlines using names such as United Express, Delta Connection, American Connection and US Airways Express under code-sharing arrangements.

A flight operated by regional carrier Colgan Air for Continental Airlines under the name Continental Express crashed in February 2009 near Buffalo, N.Y., killing 50 people. After that crash, officials at the department and the FAA said they would begin reviewing code-share contracts to see if they impinged on safety.

Investigators cited pilot training lapses by Colgan as a factor. Colgan ended flying in September as part of its parent company's restructuring.

A National Transportation Safety Board investigation and congressional hearings after the Colgan crash pointed out the differences in safety cultures that sometimes occur between the two types of airlines.

For example, at that time, some regional carriers were hiring pilots with as few as 250 hours of flight experience, which FAA rules allow. Major airlines typically hired pilots with about 10 times that much experience.

Report: Bill would set an 8-year path to residency

WASHINGTON (AP)—The White House is circulating a draft immigration bill that would create a new visa for illegal immigrants living in the United States and allow them to become legal permanent residents within eight years, according to a report published online Saturday by USA Today.

President Barack Obama's bill would create a "Lawful Prospective Immigrant" visa for the estimated 11 million illegal immigrants living in the United States. The bill includes more security funding and requires business owners to adopt a system for verifying the immigration status of new hires within four years, the newspaper said.

USA Today reported that the bill would require that immigrants pass a criminal background check, submit biometric information and pay fees to qualify for the new visa. Immigrants who served more than a year in prison for a criminal conviction or were convicted of three or more crimes and were sentenced to a total of 90 days in jail would not be eligible. Crimes committed in other countries that would bar immigrants from legally entering the country would also be ineligible.

Those immigrants facing deportation would be eligible to apply for the visa, the newspaper reported. Immigrants would be eligible to apply for a green card within eight years, if they learn English and U.S. history and government, and they would later be eligible to become U.S. citizens.

Last month a bipartisan group of senators announced they had agreed on the general outline of an immigration plan. For his part, Obama has said he would not submit his own legislation to Congress so long as law makers acted "in a timely manner." If they failed, he said, "I will send up a bill based on my proposal and insist that they vote on it right away."

Clark Stevens, a White House spokesman, said Saturday that Obama still supports a bipartisan effort to craft a comprehensive immigration bill. "While the president has made clear he will move forward if Congress fails to act, progress continues to be made and the administration has not prepared a final bill to submit," he said in a statement.

Sen. Marco Rubio, the Florida Republican who has been crafting immigration legislation, derided the draft bill as described by the newspaper as "half-baked and seriously flawed" and said it was disappointing because it repeats what he called failures of past legislation. He also said the White House had erred in not seeking input from Republican lawmakers.

"If actually proposed, the president's bill would be dead on arrival in Congress, leaving us with unsecured borders and a broken legal immigration system for years to come," Rubio said in a statement.

Ali Noorani, executive director of the National Immigration Forum, described the draft bill as a "very moderate" proposal. While the path to citizenship was welcomed by Noorani, he said not enough attention was being paid to future immigration.

"Commonsense immigration reform must include a functioning immigration system for the future," Noorani said in a statement. "Reform does not begin and end with citizenship and enforcement alone."

Gun ban would protect more than 2,200 firearms

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress' latest crack at a new assault weapons ban would protect more than 2,200 specific firearms, including a semi-automatic rifle that is nearly identical to one of the guns used in the bloodiest shootout in FBI history.

One model of that firearm, the Ruger .223 caliber Mini-14, is on the proposed list to be banned, while a different model of the same gun is on a list of exempted firearms in legislation the Senate is considering.

The gun that would be protected from the ban has fixed physical features and can't be folded to be more compact. Yet the two firearms are equally deadly.

"What a joke," said former FBI agent John Hanlon, who survived the 1986 shootout in Miami. He was shot in the head, hand, groin and hip with a Ruger Mini-14 that had a folding stock. Two FBI agents died and five others were wounded.

Hanlon recalled lying on the street as brass bullet casings showered on him. He thought the shooter had an automatic weapon.

Both models of the Ruger Mini-14 specified in the proposed bill can take detachable magazines that hold dozens of rounds of ammunition. "I can't imagine what the difference is," Hanlon said.

President Barack Obama has called for restoring a ban on military-style assault weapons and limiting the size of ammunition magazines.

A bill introduced last month by Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif. would ban 157 specific firearms designed for military and law enforcement use and exempt others made for hunting purposes. It also would ban ammunition magazines that hold more than 10 rounds.

Yet there are firearms that would be protected under Feinstein's proposal that can take large capacity magazines like the ones used in mass shootings that enable a gunman to fire dozens of rounds of ammunition without reloading.

CHICAGO (AP)—For all the talk of Jesse Jackson Jr. aspiring to be a U.S. senator or mayor of the nation's third-largest city, his career wasn't ended by attempts to amass political power.

Instead, it was the former congressman's desire for flashy items—a gold-plated Rolex watch, furs and collectibles, such as Eddie Van Halen's guitar.

In a state where stop-at-nothing political ambition has been well documented—and often rewarded—the seemingly frivolous cause of Jackson's undoing is seen by political observers and former colleagues as both nonsensical and sad.

"When you have a magic name like that, he was in position, waiting for the gun to go off, for mayor, the Senate ... he was playing with the big guys," said Paul Green, a longtime political scientist at Roosevelt University in Chicago who moderated Jackson's first congressional campaign debate. "To go down for this, you just feel sad."

Federal prosecutors on Friday charged Jackson Jr. with one count of conspiracy for allegedly spending $750,000 in campaign money on personal expenses. The Chicago Democrat's wife, former alderman Sandra Jackson, was charged with one count of filing false joint federal income tax returns.

Authorities say the returns, for the years 2006 through 2011, knowingly understated the income the couple received.

Both agreed to plead guilty in deals with federal prosecutors. Their sentencing dates have not been set, but the charges both carry possible sentences of several years in prison. Jackson Jr. also could be ordered to repay thousands of dollars in fines and forfeitures.

While former Illinois Gov. Rod Blagojevich went to prison because he tried to trade President Barack Obama's U.S. Senate seat for a more prestigious job or millions in campaign donations, Jackson could go to prison for, in part, buying memorabilia tied to martial arts movie star Bruce Lee.

The son of a civil rights icon, Jackson represented Illinois' 2nd District, which includes part of Chicago's South Side and south suburbs, for 17 years. He was wildly popular in his heavily Democratic district, consistently winning elections with more than 80 percent of the vote.

Dorner was hiding in nearby condo during manhunt

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP)—It didn't take ingenuity for Christopher Dorner to elude authorities for six days. He simply opened an unlocked door.

As law enforcement swarmed a mountain neighborhood searching for the fugitive ex-cop, Dorner hid in a condominium 100 feet across the street from a command post and a short distance where he left his burned-out truck.

On Friday, San Bernardino County investigators revealed Dorner died from an apparent self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head and defended tactics used during their search before a fiery gun battle ended an exhaustive manhunt.

Dorner, 33, is believed to have entered the condo through an unlocked door sometime on Feb. 7, soon after he arrived in the resort area of Big Bear Lake after killing three people. He locked the door and hunkered down until the condo's owners came to clean it, San Bernardino County Sheriff John McMahon said.

Deputies knocked on the door that first night but moved on when they found it locked and with no sign of a break-in, Mc-Mahon said.

"Our deputy knocked on that door and did not get an answer, and in hindsight it's probably a good thing that he did not answer based on his actions before and after that event," the sheriff said of Dorner.

When the owners went inside the condo, Dorner tied them up and fled in their car, leading to a chase and a shootout that killed a sheriff's deputy.

While some residents have criticized authorities for missing Dorner so close by, the sheriff emphatically supported his department, raising his voice and saying deputies "performed flawlessly."

"Understand we found the door locked at that condominium," he said. "My instructions were that we were not going to kick the doors open to unoccupied residences or ones where nobody answered."

Police initially weren't sure if Dorner was killed by one of their bullets or by a fire sparked when they launched incendiary tear gas inside. Now they believe he died by his own hand as the cabin was going up in flames.

Death toll in Pakistani bombing climbs to 81

QUETTA, Pakistan (AP)—The death toll from a horrific bombing that tore through a crowded vegetable market in southwestern Pakistan climbed to 81 with many of the severely wounded dying overnight, a Pakistani police official said Sunday.

Police official Fayyaz Saumbal said 164 people also were wounded by the explosion Saturday in the city of Quetta just as people shopped for produce for their evening meal. The bomb was hidden in a water tank and towed into the market by a tractor, Quetta police chief Zubair Mahmood told reporters.

It was the deadliest incident since bombings targeting Shiites in the same city killed 86 people earlier this year, leading which is dominated by Sunni Muslims. Many of the Shiites in Quetta, including those in the neighborhood attacked Saturday, are Hazaras, an ethnic group that migrated to Pakistan from Afghanistan more than a century ago.

The blast, which destroyed shops and caused a two-story building to collapse, left a massive crater where it exploded.

Mahmood said police did not yet know who was behind the bombing but a local television station reported that Lashker-e-Jhangvi, a Sunni extremist group that has targeted Shiites in the past, had called to claim responsibility.

Last year was particularly deadly for Shiites in Pakistan. According to Human Rights Watch, more than 400 were killed in targeted attacks across the country. The human rights group said more than 125 were killed in Baluchistan province, most of whom belonged to the Hazara community.

Rights groups have accused the government of not doing enough to protect Shiites in the country.

Bangladeshis demand death for war crimes convict

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP)—For many in Bangladesh, the “V” for victory sign was more than they could bear.

They had waited more than four decades for justice in the mass killings and rapes during their independence war. But there was a smiling Abdul Quader Mollah on Feb. 5 apparently celebrating his life sentence—given in place of an expected death sentence—for his role in the killing of 381 civilians.

Within hours, thousands of university students demanding his death poured into the streets of Dhaka, the seeds of what has grown into a mass protest that has exposed again the unhealed wounds from the nation's 1971 war for independence from Pakistan.

“I could not take it. That was really insulting,” Gazi Nasiruddin Khokon, a protester who works for an online newspaper, said of Mollah's victorious gesture after his sentencing last week. “If we don't get proper justice for such crimes, where would we stand in the future?”

Mollah was convicted by a special war crimes tribunal that was set up to hold people accountable for the first time for their roles in the civil war, where Bangladesh says as many as 3 million people were killed and 200,000 women raped by Pakistani troops and local collaborators.

But the trials are also seen as part of a long and bitter rivalry between Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina and the main opposition leader, former Prime Minister Khaleda Zia, who is allied with the Islamic party Jamaat-e-Islami, many of whose leaders face charges before the tribunal.

Jamaat, which opposed Bangladesh's fight for independence, and Zia have called the tribunal politically motivated, while international rights groups have raised questions about the conduct of the trials. The head of one of the tribunals resigned in December over reports he had improper conversations with a lawyer about the panel.

Mollah, an assistant secretary of Jamaat, was found guilty Feb. 5 of killing a student and a family of 11 and of aiding Pakistani troops in killing 369 others. Members of his party took to the streets in anger at his conviction, exploding homemade bombs and clashing with police.

But they were soon overshadowed by thousands of protesters who flooded a major intersection in the capital, Dhaka, upset by what they said was a lenient sentence of life in prison, which actually means just 14 years in Bangladesh. They also were inflamed by the image of Mollah smiling at journalists and holding up two fingers in a “V” sign as he was led from the court, apparently in celebration of his avoiding the death penalty.

Fueled by online posts, the protests grew until hundreds of thousands of people took over the Shahbagh intersection, which they renamed Projonmo Chatter, or New Generation Platform.

Many slept there, collecting donations for food. Others came after work and stayed late into the night, listening to chants for justice over loudspeakers. Some beat drums and wrapped their heads in scarves with slogans saying “We want death for the war criminals” and “Traitors have no place in this land.”

The protesters also called for Jamaat to be banned.

The immensely popular national cricket team came to the site to express solidarity with the protesters, and on Thursday evening, organizers said more than 100,000 candles were lit at the site.

To counter any accusations that the protest was organized by Hasina's government, politicians were banned from the stage.

“This is a history. A new history is in the making,” said Aminul Islam, a 30-year-old bank employee at the protest site.

“It is unbelievable,” he said. “This is our fight, this is another war, not with rifles in hand, but with an unconditional urge to bringing those to book for killing our people and dishonoring our mothers and sisters.”

Even though many of the protesters had not been born when the war raged, they were still scarred by it and the lack of accountability for those accused of crimes during the fighting, said Hassan Shahriar. To some that lack of accountability was reflected in the fact two members of Jamaat have served as Cabinet ministers. “Generation after generation have seen no remedy, no punishment for the perpetrators. Rather they have become influential political actors, social actors, and the new generation has been silently frustrated,” he said. “The wounds are still fresh.”

Karzai: Afghan forces can't request airstrikes

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP)—Afghan President Hamid Karzai said Saturday that he will issue a decree banning Afghan security forces from asking international troops to carry out airstrikes under “any circumstances.”

The announcement came amid anger over a joint Afghan-NATO operation this week that Afghan officials said killed 10 civilians, including women and children, in northeast Kunar province.

“I will issue a decree tomorrow that no Afghan security forces, in any circumstances, in any circumstances can ask for the foreigners' planes for carrying out operations on our homes and villages,” Karzai said in a speech at the Afghan National Military Academy in Kabul.

Civilian deaths at the hands of foreign forces, in particular airstrikes, have been among the most divisive issues of the 11-year-old war, although the U.S.-led coalition has implemented measures to mitigate them. But the Afghan military also relies heavily on air support to gain advantage in the fight against Taliban militants and other insurgents.

Many have expressed concern that the impending withdrawal of international combat forces by the end of 2014 will deprive government security forces of that crucial weapon. President Barack Obama has announced that he will withdraw about half of the 66,000 U.S. troops in Afghanistan within a year.

According to Gen. John Allen, the former top commander of U.S. and NATO forces in Afghanistan, the coalition can provide air support to troops on the ground anywhere in Afghanistan within 12 minutes of a request. He said Afghan forces would have to get used to not having the same abilities in the future.

Jamie Graybeal, a spokesman for the U.S.-led coalition, declined to comment on Karzai's remarks because alliance officials have not yet seen the decree.

Builder says plan for new Titanic draws interest

HONG KONG (AP)—The Australian billionaire who's planning to build a high-tech replica of the Titanic at a Chinese shipyard has received an “overwhelming” response from people who want to be the first paying passengers. Representatives for Clive Palmer, who in April announced a preliminary agreement with state-owned Chinese company CSC Jinling Shipyard to build Titanic II, said Saturday that his shipping company had received inquiries from people in the United States, Britain, Asia and South America. Interest has been so strong that “we've probably had half a dozen people already offering more than $1 million to get on the maiden voyage” slated for 2016, said James McDonald, global marketing director of Blue Star Line Pty. Ltd.

Video gaming company says no Spitfires in Myanmar

YANGON, Myanmar (AP)—A global video gaming company that funded a high-profile hunt for dozens of World War II-era British fighters in Myanmar has some bad news for aviation enthusiasts: It says none of the legendary planes are buried in the Southeast Asian country. Excavation teams carrying out surveys on the ground, however, said Saturday that they would not give up the search. The hunt for the lost planes was launched amid hope that as many as 140 rare Spitfires were hidden in crates in pristine condition in three locations in Myanmar.

Former Singapore PM Lee Kuan Yew hospitalized

SINGAPORE (AP)—Lee Kuan Yew, Singapore's first prime minister, has been hospitalized following a brain-related blockage. A statement from the Prime Minister's Office says the 89-year-old Lee was admitted to Singapore General Hospital on Friday after experiencing a suspected transient ischaemic attack, which occurs when blood flow to the brain stops for a period of time. The condition is associated with irregular heartbeats. The statement says Lee is recovering but will remain in the hospital for a few days.

Russian region begins recovery from meteor fall

CHELİYABINSK, Russia (AP)—As a small army of people worked to replace acres of windows shattered by the enormous explosion from a meteor, many joked on Saturday about what had happened in this troubled pocket of Russia.

One of the most popular jests: Residents of the meteor were terrified to see Chelyabinsk approaching.

The fireball that streaked into the sky over this tough industrial city at about sunrise Friday was undeniably traumatic. Nearly 1,200 people were reported injured by the shock wave from the explosion, estimated to be as strong as 20 Hiroshima atomic bombs.

But it also brought a sense of cooperation in a troubled region. Large numbers of volunteers came forward to help fix the damage caused by the explosion and many residents came together on the Internet—first to find out what happened and soon to make jokes.

Chelyabinsk, nicknamed Tankograd because it produced the famed Soviet T-34 tanks, can be as grim as its backbone heavy industries. Long winters where temperatures routinely hit minus-30 Celsius (minus-22 Fahrenheit) add to a general dour mien, as do worries about dangerous facilities in the surrounding region.

In 1957, a waste tank at the Mayak nuclear weapons plant in the Chelyabinsk region exploded, contaminating 23,000 square kilometers (9,200 square miles) and prompting authorities to evacuate 10,000 nearby residents. It is now Russia's main nuclear waste disposal facility. A vast plant for disposing of chemical weapons lies 85 kilometers (50 miles) east of the city.

"The city is a place where people always seem bitter with each other," said music teacher Ilya Shibanov. But the meteor "was one of the rare times when people started to live together through one event."

"For most people, it's a good excuse for a joke," he said.

It also is why Shibanov quickly concocted a rap video that got wide Internet attention, including the lines: "Pow, pow, pow—everything flew and factory windows crumbled. This Friday the bars are going to be full, so be ready for the aftermath."

But for many, it's provided a reason to roll up their sleeves and get to work repairing the more than 4,000 buildings in the city and region where windows were shattered, or to provide other services.

More than 24,000 people, including volunteers, have mobilized in the region to cover windows, gather warm clothes and food, and make other relief efforts, the regional governor's office said. Crews from glass companies in adjacent regions were being flown in.

Gov. Mikhail Yurevich on Saturday said that damage from the high-altitude explosion—believed to have been as powerful as 20 Hiroshima bombs—is estimated at 1 billion rubles ($33 million). He promised to have all the broken windows replaced within a week. But that is a long wait in a frigid region. The midday temperature in Chelyabinsk was minus-12 C (10 F), and for many the immediate task was to put up plastic sheeting and boards on shattered residential windows.

Meanwhile, the search continued for major fragments of the meteor.

In the town of Chebarkul, 80 kilometers (50 miles) west of Chelyabinsk city, divers explored the bottom of an ice-crusted lake looking for meteor fragments believed to have fallen there, leaving a six-meter-wide (20-foot-wide) hole. Emergency Ministry spokeswoman Irina Rossius told Russian news agencies the search hadn't found anything.

Police kept a small crowd of curious onlookers from venturing out onto the icy lake, where a tent was set up for the divers.

Many of them were still trying to process the memories of the strange day they'd lived through.

In this frame grab made from dashboard camera video, a meteor streaks through the sky over Chelyabinsk, about 1500 kilometers (930 miles) east of Moscow, Friday, Feb. 15, 2013.

Sectarian kidnappings spread strife in north Syria

BEIRUT (AP)—A rural patch of north Syria has been shaken by a series of tit-for-tat, sectarian kidnappings, anti-regime activists said Saturday, highlighting how much the country's civil war has enflamed tensions between different religious groups.

While all activists agreed that kidnappings had spiked in recent days between armed men in neighboring Shiite and Sunni Muslim villages, reports of the numbers kidnapped by both sides ranged from a few dozen to more than 300.

The kidnappings and the raw feelings they have provoked bode ill for the chances of reconciliation between Syrians, many of whom have come to see the civil war as either a sacred battle to advance their faith or a mortal struggle for the survival of their sect.

Since Syria's crisis began with protests calling for political reforms in March 2011, it has gradually grown more sectarian. Most of the rebels who have taken up arms to topple the regime of President Bashar Assad are from Syria's Sunni majority. Assad himself is an Alawite, an offshoot of Shiite Islam, and has heavily stocked his security forces with fellow Alawites and Shiites.

The rise of Islamic fundamentalists among the rebels makes many among Syria's minorities—including Alawites, Shiites, Christians, Armenians and others—fear that a rebel victory could leave them with no place in Syria.

The spate of kidnappings in recent days in the northern Idlib province, which lies along the border with Turkey, provides one example of how Syria's crisis has raised the specter of increasingly sectarian violence. Local activists said Sunni-Shiite tensions were rare in the area before Syria's crisis began, and that residents of the only two Shiite villages, Fua and Kifarya, moved freely through the constellation of Sunni villages around them.

Tensions rose, however, after the crisis began and opposition members armed themselves to fight back against Assad's harsh crackdown on dissent. Most of the Sunni villages embraced the uprising, while the Shiites stood by the regime. Many say the government armed its supporters to help fight the rebels.

Libya arrests suspected Christian missionaries

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP)—Four foreigners were arrested in Libya on suspicion of distributing books about Christianity and proselytizing, a Libyan police spokesman said on Saturday. Police spokesman Hussein bin Hamid said the suspects were from South Africa, Egypt and South Korea, and one held both Swedish and U.S. nationality. The Swedish Foreign Ministry confirmed that a dual national Swedish-American citizen was arrested while traveling on a U.S. passport. The U.S. Embassy in Libya declined comment. Spreading Christianity is a crime in the predominantly Muslim North African country.

Ivory Coast police disperse pro-Gbagbo march

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP)—Police in Ivory Coast fired tear gas to disperse a march by supporters of the country's former President Laurent Gbagbo. The secretary-general for the youth wing of Gbagbo's party that organized Saturday's march, Justin Koua, said that 16 protesters were arrested, and six others were wounded. Koua said they thought the gathering was permitted, before being told it was banned. Hundreds gathered Saturday in the economic capital to call for Gbagbo's liberation days before the International Criminal Court will make a decision as to whether he will go to trial for crimes against humanity.

Vatican raises possibility of early March conclave

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The Vatican raised the possibility Saturday that the conclave to elect the next pope might start sooner than March 15, the earliest date possible under current rules that require a 15 to 20 day waiting period after the papacy becomes vacant.

Vatican spokesman the Rev. Federico Lombardi said that Vatican rules on papal succession are open to interpretation and that "this is a question that people are discussing."

Any change to the law itself would have to be approved by the pope before he resigns.

But if Vatican officials determine that the matter is just a question of interpreting the existing law, "it is possible that church authorities can prepare a proposal to be taken up by the cardinals on the first day after the papal vacancy" to move up the start of the conclave, Lombardi said.

The 15 to 20 day waiting period is in place to allow time for all cardinals who don't live in Rome to arrive, under the usual circumstance of a pope dying. But in this case the cardinals already know that this pontificate will end Feb. 28, with the resignation of Pope Benedict XVI, and therefore can get to Rome in plenty of time to take part in the conclave, Lombardi said.

The date of the conclave's start is important because Holy Week begins March 24, with Palm Sunday Mass followed by Easter Sunday on March 31. In order to have a new pope in place in time for the most solemn liturgical period on the church calendar, he would need to be installed by Sunday, March 17, because of the strong tradition to hold installation Mass on a Sunday. Given the tight time frame, speculation has mounted that some arrangement would be made to start the conclave earlier than a strict reading of the law would allow.

Questions about the start of the conclave have swirled since Benedict stunned the world on Feb. 11, by announcing that he would retire, the first pontiff in 600 years to abdicate rather than stay in office until death. His decision has created a host of questions about how the Vatican will proceed, given that its plans for the so-called "sede vacante"—or vacant seat—period between papacies are based on the process starting with a papal death.

How life on run ended for California police killer

By A. BREED, JULIE WATSON and TAMI ABDOLLAH
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BIG BEAR LAKE, Calif. (AP)—As soon as he heard officers were chasing the suspected cop killer in a stolen truck, San Bernardino County Sheriff's Deputy Roger Loftis was certain: His buddy Jeremiah MacKay would be there.

In 15 years with the department, "Jer" had earned about a dozen and a half awards for 10851s—the California penal code for grand theft auto. Once, while heading to a bar to celebrate another award, MacKay noticed there were no keys in the ignition of the car next to him at a traffic light, and he veered off.

He waltzed into the bar two hours later, a grin stretched across that fair, freckled face, a copy of an auto recovery record in his hand.

Last week, Loftis called his fishing, drinking and golfing buddy to see how he was doing. He knew the 35-year-old detective had been working around the clock, scouring the San Bernardino Mountains in the search for former Los Angeles Police Officer Christopher Dorner.

"If that guy's still on this mountain," MacKay told him, "I'm going to find him."

When the announcer reported that two deputies had exchanged fire with the suspect, Loftis got a sick feeling in his stomach. The 54-year-old corrections officer sent his friend a text.

"I know you're busy," he typed. "But let me know you're OK. ASAP."

There was no answer.

About an hour later, a colleague called with the news: MacKay, husband and father of two, was dead. Soon, so would be his killer.

Like the Unabomber and other mass killers, the 33-year-old former cop wrote a "manifesto." And, like so many others, Dorner's perceptions of the world and its supposed injustices against him seem out of sync with reality. Why now?

Was it the supposed institutional racism that cost him his LAPD badge? That was four years ago.

Was it, as he once suggested, residual trauma from his military service in the Middle East? Records show a relatively benign tour of duty, well outside the war zone.

One marriage fell apart; a second went no further than the license application. This, too, he seemed to blame on others—anyone but himself.

"I never had the opportunity to have a family of my own," he wrote to his targets. "I'm terminating yours."

Even his boasts of paramilitary prowess and promise to "bring unconventional and asymmetrical warfare" to southern California evaporated in a cavalcade of broken-down vehicles, failed hijackings and a botched hog-tying. His weeklong stint as America's most wanted fugitive ended in a shootout with police, and then what officials said was a self-inflicted gunshot to the head.

At 6 feet and 270 pounds, Christopher Jordan Dorner looked every inch the college football player he once was.

Melinda Yates befriended Dorner when they attended Southern Utah University together in Cedar City, a small town northeast of Las Vegas. She remembers him as "kind of like a big teddy bear," always smiling.

Apparently, behind that sweet smile there was rage.

Dorner claimed his earliest experience with racism was in first grade at a Christian school, when he punched and kicked a fellow student who'd called him a "nigger" on the playground. The principal "swatted" the other boy for the slur, then struck Dorner for failing to "turn the other cheek as Jesus did."

"That day," he would write in the now infamous manifesto, "I made a life decision that I will not tolerate racial derogatory terms spoken to me."

Dorner joined the Navy in July 2002. He told a reporter that he wanted to fly SH-60/MH-60 Seahawk helicopters on special operations and search-and-rescue missions - but later told an acquaintance that a problem with vertigo killed those dreams.

So he went into the Navy Reserve doing mostly administrative work after his active-duty stint ended in June 2004.

Soon afterward, he shifted his sights to the LAPD.

He entered the academy on Feb. 7, 2005.

Like the other cadets, Dorner went through the department's rigorous six-month, 920-hour academy training. Upon completion, he joined a training officer on the street, working regular 12-hour shifts. There was at least one bump in the road: He was suspended for two days for accidental discharge of his firearm.

A year after Dorner became a police officer, he rose to the rank of lieutenant in the Navy on Aug. 1, 2006—his last promotion.

He was called up in the Reserve and left on a six-month deployment to Bahrain on Nov. 3, 2006. He worked mostly providing port protection, earning an Iraq Campaign Medal and Global War on Terrorism Service Medal.

Dorner returned to the LAPD in 2007 and resumed his training. That is when his career—and life—went off the rails.

Sgt. Teresa Evans, his training officer, said Dorner repeatedly asked why he was being put back on patrol without reintegration training. On one occasion, she said, he began weeping in the patrol car and demanded to go back to the academy.

Dorner told Evans that he "might have some issues regarding his deployment," she told investigators.

A day after Evans submitted a poor review, Dorner told internal affairs that she had kicked a mentally ill man in the chest and left cheek during an arrest. He was relieved of duty on Sept. 4, 2008.

A police review panel ultimately found the allegation untrue. He was officially fired on Jan. 2, 2009.

There were already hints of a troubled personal life; Dorner married April Carter in April 2007 and bought a home a few miles from the Las Vegas Strip. Less than a month later, the couple filed for a divorce.

(More than five years later, on Oct. 19 of last year, Las Vegas records show that he and Ali Kristine McDonald obtained a marriage license. But there is no indication they actually married.)

Months after he was fired, Dorner filed a writ in Los Angeles Superior Court against the LAPD, alleging wrongful termination. He continued filing appeals in different courts up until 2011.

But why Dorner unleashed his revenge now is unclear. Former roommate J'Anna Viskoc has a theory.

For about two months in the summer of 2008, the Las Vegas manicurist rented a room in Dorner's home. Aside from all the guns—which were "on the floor, under the cushions"—she remembers the uniformed portraits and framed displays of his medals.

"I feel like being a police officer and being in the military, that was his identity," she said. "That was who he was."

On Feb. 1, Dorner received an honorable discharge, ending his lackluster 11-year Navy career.

"Maybe that's what set him off," Viskoc wondered. "That he couldn't win."

Dorner claimed his first victims on Feb. 3.

Monica Quan, 28, was an assistant women's basketball coach at California State University, Fullerton. She was also the daughter of retired LAPD Capt. Randal Quan—the man who had represented Dorner in his disciplinary hearings.

She lived in an Irvine condominium with boyfriend Keith Lawrence—a former basketball player and University of Southern California cop whose shoes and buckles she had stayed up until the wee hours polishing when he was at the police academy. On Jan. 26, Lawrence, 27, had strewn the apartment floor with rose petals, gotten down on one knee and proposed, according to the Los Angeles Times.

Just over a week later, at 9:10 p.m., Quan and Lawrence were found slumped in their car in the parking lot of their condo complex. They were fatally shot.

The next morning, an employee emptying the trash behind a San Diego-area auto parts store spotted some military gear in a trash bin. Around that same time, Dorner posted his 11,000-word screed entitled "Last Resort" on Facebook.

"This was a necessary evil that had to be executed in order for me to obtain my NAME back," Dorner wrote. "The only thing that changes policy and garners attention is death."

The rambling post went on: "When the truth comes out, the killing stops."

The document would lurk in cyberspace for two more days before police discovered it and connected it to the Irvine killings. They held a news conference to name Dorner as a suspect.

The next day, Feb. 7, Dorner struck again.

Around 1:30 a.m. two LAPD officers assigned to protect one of the people named in Dorner's manifesto spotted him in the Riverside County community of Corona. During a shootout, one officer was grazed on the forehead.

A short while later in nearby Riverside, SWAT team Officer Michael Crain and trainee Andrew Tachias were in the middle of a graveyard shift.

The 34-year-old former Marine had served two tours of duty in Kuwait before joining the Riverside force in 2001. As a Marine, Crain had once taught urban warfare tactics, but on this day he had no time to react.

The two were waiting at a stoplight when someone—believed to be Dorner—raced up and opened fire on them. Tachias, 27, was critically wounded; Crain was pronounced dead at a hospital.

Before dawn, freeway signs lit up statewide with a description of Dorner and his pickup, and a warning that he should be considered armed and extremely dangerous.

Later that morning, authorities found a burned-out pickup truck near the Bear Mountain ski area in the San Bernardino Mountains. The truck, which had a broken axle, was loaded with weapons and camping gear.

Police later confirmed it was the black Nissan Titan Dorner had so religiously buffed and polished.

Tips poured in, topping 1,000 after a $1 million reward was posted on Feb. 9. The Mexican navy went on alert following a report that Dorner had attempted to steal a yacht in San Diego.

Other suspected sightings of Dorner over the week led to authorities mistakenly firing on two newspaper carriers, shutting down a Navy base in San Diego, evacuating a Los Angeles area home improvement store, and raiding at a low-budget motel across the border in Tijuana, Mexico. But the manhunt was centered on the mountains. That was Jeremiah MacKay's territory.

MacKay's father, Alan, is something of a legend in these hills.

A former captain with the San Bernardino County Fire Department, the elder MacKay had played a key role during the 2003 "Old Fire," which burned more than 91,000 acres, killed five people and destroyed more than 1,000 homes. The Redlands resident put in 15-hour days, fighting the fire and acting as a department spokesman when needed.

Loftis says the son had initially planned to follow in the father's footsteps. But a few ride-alongs with deputies patrolling the waters of Lake Arrowhead convinced him to go for another type of badge.

The younger MacKay had been putting in 12-hour days searching for Dorner. On Feb. 9, an Associated Press reporter ran across him during a patrol around the lake.

Despite having been on duty since 5 a.m., MacKay and his partner were in good spirits. Standing by the car door in full tactical gear, MacKay tucked the stock of his Mini-14 rifle against his shoulder and practiced sighting down the barrel, aiming playfully at a snowdrift.

"This one, you just never know if the guy's going to pop out or where he's going to pop out," he told a reporter, crinkling his brow and shaking his head. "We're hoping this comes to a close without any more casualties. The best thing would be for him to give up."

The next day, MacKay was excited to see his photo on the front page of the Los Angeles Times. But he chided himself, cousin Kelly Mitchell says, for having what he considered "a smug look" on his face.

Jeremiah and Lynette MacKay married in late 2011. Lynette had a 7-year-old daughter from a previous relationship; about four months ago, she gave birth to a son.

As a bagpiper for the Inland Empire Emerald Society, MacKay had played at many memorials and funerals for fallen officers. He knew this hunt was perilous, but he knew just as well that Dorner had to be stopped.

Study: Fish in drug-tainted water suffer reaction

By JEFF DONN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON (AP)—What happens to fish that swim in waters tainted by traces of drugs that people take? When it's an anti-anxiety drug, they become hyper, anti-social and aggressive, a study found. They even get the munchies.

It may sound funny, but it could threaten the fish population and upset the delicate dynamics of the marine environment, scientists say.

The findings, published online Thursday in the journal Science, add to the mounting evidence that minuscule amounts of medicines in rivers and streams can alter the biology and behavior of fish and other marine animals.

This circa 2009 photo provided by Bent Christensen show perch fish swimming together in Sweden.

"I think people are starting to understand that pharmaceuticals are environmental contaminants," said Dana Kolpin, a researcher for the U.S. Geological Survey who is familiar with the study.

Calling their results alarming, the Swedish researchers who did the study suspect the little drugged fish could become easier targets for bigger fish because they are more likely to venture alone into unfamiliar places.

"We know that in a predator-prey relation, increased boldness and activity combined with decreased sociality ... means you're going to be somebody's lunch quite soon," said Gregory Moller, a toxicologist at the University of Idaho and Washington State University. "It removes the natural balance."

Researchers around the world have been taking a close look at the effects of pharmaceuticals in extremely low concentrations, measured in parts per billion. Such drugs have turned up in waterways in Europe, the U.S. and elsewhere over the past decade.

They come mostly from humans and farm animals; the drugs pass through their bodies in unmetabolized form. These drug traces are then piped to water treatment plants, which are not designed to remove them from the cleaned water that flows back into streams and rivers.

The Associated Press first reported in 2008 that the drinking water of at least 51 million Americans carries low concentrations of many common drugs. The findings were based on questionnaires sent to water utilities, which reported the presence of antibiotics, sedatives, sex hormones and other drugs.

Clues to why most survived China melamine scandal

WASHINGTON (AP)—Scientists wondering why some children and not others survived one of China's worst food safety scandals have uncovered a suspect: germs that live in the gut.

In 2008, at least six babies died and 300,000 became sick after being fed infant formula that had been deliberately and illegally tainted with the industrial chemical melamine. There were some lingering puzzles: How did it cause kidney failure, and why wasn't everyone equally at risk?

A team of researchers from the U.S. and China re-examined those questions in a series of studies in rats. In findings released Wednesday, they reported that certain intestinal bacteria play a crucial role in how the body handles melamine.

The intestines of all mammals teem with different species of bacteria that perform different jobs. To see if one of those activities involves processing melamine, researchers from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and Shanghai Jiao Tong University gave lab rats antibiotics to kill off some of the germs—and then fed them melamine.

The antibiotic-treated rats excreted twice as much of the melamine as rats that didn't get antibiotics, and they experienced fewer kidney stones and other damage.

A closer look identified why: A particular intestinal germ—named Klebsiella terrigena—was metabolizing melamine to create a more toxic byproduct, the team reported in the journal Science Translational Medicine.

Previous studies have estimated that fewer than 1 percent of healthy people harbor that bacteria species. A similar fraction of melamine-exposed children in China got sick, the researchers wrote. But proving that link would require studying stool samples preserved from affected children, they cautioned.

Jim and Karen Reynolds were in the process of refurbishing their condo near Big Bear, working on it off and on through the winter season. They had last been there on Feb. 6 and weren't planning to come back until Valentine's Day, but decided to check in early after learning that Dornier's truck had been abandoned nearby.

When they walked into the upstairs living room Tuesday morning, Dornier was waiting for them with his gun drawn. He had been there at least five days—within shouting distance of a command post set up by the people hunting him.

"Stay calm," he shouted. When Karen Reynolds turned to run out, he grabbed her from behind.

Karen Reynolds said Dornier was calm and "very methodical" as he instructed them to sit, then tied their hands and legs.

"I don't have a problem with you," he told the couple. "I just want to clear my name."

Dornier moved the couple to a bedroom and shut the door.

When they felt he had gone, Karen Reynolds managed to get to her feet and, with her hands still tied behind her back, open the door. To her amazement, Dornier had left her cellphone on the living room table.

She picked it up and dialed 911. It was 12:22 p.m. Tuesday.

Dornier had taken off in the couple's purple Nissan SUV. It wasn't long before officers, now alerted, spotted the fugitive.

Dornier managed to evade a group of wardens from the California Department of Fish and Wildlife and some sheriff's deputies. But he later crashed the Nissan and struck out on foot.

Rick Heltebrake was driving the perimeter of a Boy Scout camp he watches over when Dornier—his bulletproof vest bristling with rifle magazines—emerged from the tree line.

"I don't want to hurt you," Dornier said in a calm, business-like voice as he pointed his rifle at the 51-year-old Heltebrake. "Start walking and take your dog."

Heltebrake sensed that Dornier, who stole his truck, was on a mission, and that he wasn't part of the agenda. Suni took his 3-year-old Dalmatian and walked away.

Heltebrake had just called police when he heard gunfire.

■ ■ ■ ■ ■

When he left the house that morning, MacKay told his wife that he'd never been happier, Mitchell, his cousin, said. He called her the love of his life.

Hours later, he was on the trail of the stolen pickup.

The fugitive raced 25 miles down the mountain as officers converged. MacKay and his partner, Alex Collins, responded.

Not far up the road from where Dornier had left Heltebrake, some game wardens spotted the white truck speeding erratically. Dornier opened the window and fired.

According to sheriff's department officials, MacKay and his partner followed where they believed the truck had gone. They were unaware that Dornier had crashed it. They spotted tracks in the snow leading to a cabin and got out of their cruiser.

The pair stopped about 30 yards from the cabin to devise a plan when shots were fired. Neither deputy had a chance to return fire. Both were hit multiple times. A doctor told Loftis death for MacKay came instantly or in "just seconds."

Collins survived but has undergone multiple surgeries. A SWAT team arrived quickly and laid down covering fire to allow the officers to be airlifted.

Dornier set off some smoke grenades and prepared to make his last stand. His end game would play out on live television.

Officers from across the region converged on the cabin, cutting off all escape. Four hours after the chase Tuesday, police launched tear gas through the windows.

Around 4:45 p.m., flames and smoke began billowing from the house. Officers then heard the single gunshot from inside.

The manhunt was over.

■ ■ ■ ■ ■

In the end, Dornier fell blessedly short of his stated goals.

Despite declaring war on "those in LAPD uniform whether on or off duty," the only victim with a direct link to the department was Monica Quan. And it is more than a little ironic that a man lashing out against racial injustice should murder the daughter of the LAPD's first Chinese-American captain.

A joint memorial service for Quan and Lawrence is planned for Feb. 24 at Irvine's Concordia University, where they met. Lawrence - at the request of his father - will be buried in his public safety officer's uniform, said his training supervisor Capt. David Carlisle.

The service had been on hold while Quan's father was in custody to protect him from Dornier's rampage.

On Wednesday, Crain—the father who loved attending his 4-year-old daughter's dance recitals and coaching his son's baseball team—was buried with full honors. His 10-year-old son, Ian, joined officers carrying his father's casket out of the church to the mournful drone of bagpipes.

MacKay's funeral is scheduled Thursday at San Bernardino's San Manuel Amphitheater. The Los Angeles Police Emerald Society Pipes and Drums, with whom he'd often played, will be there to send him off.

Loftis is having trouble imagining life without his friend. Coming to grips with the depth of Dornier's betrayal is even harder.

"He got the best of us. He took one of the best that we have," he said ruefully. "He lost a job because he didn't deserve it, and he takes these officers' lives, really, for nothing. It was stupid and senseless."

Personal Trainer

Some unusual warm-ups

The point of a pre-exercise warm-up is to increase blood flow to your muscles and gently stretch them; here are some challenging ones:

Hold hips and abdomen up Legs straight

Four on the floor

1 Start as if you're doing push-ups, but walk forward with your hands

Keep legs straight

2 Walk feet forward in tiny steps toward your hands

Go as far as possible

3 Walk hands forward again; repeat cycle until you have moved 30 ft. (10 m)

Long lunge

1 Step far forward; put the opposite hand down beside your front foot to balance

2 Touch your other elbow to top of your foot

Keep knee
above floor

3 Take a long step forward with rear foot, and repeat process on other side

Charlie Sheen pays for injured teen's therapy dog

MILWAUKEE (AP)—There's a 15-year-old Florida girl who didn't really know much about Charlie Sheen before this week—but does now.

The actor wired $10,000 to Teagan Marti and her family on Thursday for a therapy dog to help in her rehabilitation from injuries sustained when she plummeted 100 feet from a Wisconsin amusement park ride in 2010.

"I think he's a very kind person for helping me and my family and very generous," Teagan Marti said by phone Thursday from her home in Parkland, Fla.

Teagan Marti suffered brain, spine, pelvis and internal injuries in July 2010 when nets and air bags that were supposed to catch riders on a free-fall ride were not raised. She had convinced her family to make the trip from Florida to Extreme World in Wisconsin Dells after seeing the amusement park's Terminal Velocity ride on the Travel Channel.

She was hospitalized in Wisconsin and Florida for three months. She initially had no use of her arms or legs but through physical therapy is able to walk again with a walker.

Teagan Marti's mother, Julie Marti, said they are financially in trouble from the medical bills and her recent divorce. Their house is being foreclosed upon and insurance isn't covering physical therapy anymore, she said. She had no idea how they would pay for the English Golden Retriever puppy.

"I'm in such disbelief," Julie Marti said. "I was crying. ... What a guy. What a guy."

The dog is being trained in Fond du Lac to turn on lights, pick up objects and be the teen's constant companion.

Lucia Wilgus, of Eau Claire, became friends with the Martis after hearing of the accident and has spearheaded fundraising and helped find the dog and arrange training.

She sent a letter this week to Sheen through Sheen's godfather, who is a Wilgus family friend and Benedictine brother in the Benet Lake, Wis. She estimated the training and related costs would be around $6,000.

Sheen said he decided to give more for extra costs. The request had a "personal vibe" since it came through his godfather, and "if there's a need for more I told them to call me," he said.

"I like to pay it forward," Sheen said Thursday in a phone interview from Los Angeles. "People come into your orbit for a reason. You don't always know what that is ahead of time, but if I ignore these requests then I don't have any opportunity to see where these things lead us, or lead me."

He said he doesn't like to publicize most of his donations, but wanted to talk about this one to inspire others to donate.

Teagan Marti gets the dog on her birthday in September but hasn't made up her mind on a name.

"I think they should name the dog Charlie," Sheen joked.

Jerry Trainor of 'iCarly' stars in new sitcom

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Jerry Trainor was wrapping up five seasons as goofy big brother Spencer on Nickelodeon's "iCarly" when his next job popped up in the same TV neighborhood.

This time, Trainor moves from sidekick to star in the channel's new "Wendell & Vinnie." The sitcom features the lanky actor as a care-free single guy who becomes guardian to his orphaned nephew, Wendell (Buddy Handleson, "Shake It Up").

Vinnie is a "real dude," Trainor said, whose time is spent on video games, comic books and looking for hot dates. Wendell is a 12-year-old who's well above his uncle on the maturity scale.

Together, they're an odd couple who get by with help from each other and their extended family, including Vinnie's sister Wilma (Nicole Sullivan, "MadTV") and divorced neighbor—and Vinnie's potential love interest—Taryn (Haley Strode). The 20-episode season, debuting 8 p.m. EST Saturday, will include guest appearances by Dan Castellaneta ("The Simpsons"), Robin Givens ("House of Payne") and Willie Garson ("Sex and the City").

Trainor, 36, said he was weighing pilot scripts when the one for "Wendell & Vinnie" came his way from writer-producer Jay Kogen ("Frasier," "Malcolm in the Middle").

"I was blown away," Trainor said. "It was hilarious. ... I immediately called my manager and said this is the one."

The series has an added bonus because it's a traditional multi-camera show taped in front of a studio audience: "The fact I get to go up in front of an audience week after week, that is my drug," he said.

Trainor has made a comfortable home at Nickelodeon, with hit "iCarly," the Crazy Steve character he played on "Drake & Josh," the 2010 TV movie "Best Player" and his ongoing work on the animated comedy "T.U.F.F. Puppy" as the voice of Dudley Puppy.

Singer Chubby Checker files lawsuit over racy app

ST. PETERSBURG, Florida (AP)—Rock and roll legend Chubby Checker is twisting mad over a software application that allowed women to estimate the size of a man's penis based on his shoe size.

The singer, whose real name is Ernest Evans, filed a trademark infringement lawsuit against Hewlett Packard and Palm Inc. in federal court in Fort Pierce, Florida, on Tuesday, saying that the app "adversely affects Chubby Checker's brand and value."

The app, which was called "The Chubby Checker," was an unauthorized use of Checker's name and trademark, the lawsuit alleges.

"He's hurt," said Checker's attorney Willie Gary. "He worked hard to build his name and reputation over the years."

The app is no longer available.

Checker, who is 71 and lives in Pennsylvania, is seeking a half-billion dollars in damages and restitution.

HP issued a brief statement about the matter on Thursday.

"The application was removed in September 2012 and is no longer on any Palm or HP hosted web site," wrote Michael Thacker, HP's director of corporate media relations.

He told The Associated Press that the app was removed the same month that Gary sent a cease-and-desist letter to the companies on behalf of Checker.

It's unclear how long the 99-cent app was available to customers.

According to the industry website WebOSNation, the app sold fewer than 100 copies.

The app was not developed by HP or Palm; it was developed by a third-party. The app developer is not named in the lawsuit.

"We're going straight to the source," said Gary.

According to court documents, the lawsuit was filed in Florida because HP and Palm do business in the state.

Checker did not give permission or receive compensation from the app, which purported to be for entertainment purposes only.

The lawsuit said that Checker has received patents and trademark licenses for his name to be used for a line of snacks and other food products.

Checker's song, "The Twist" was at the top of the Billboard charts for 18 weeks in 1960 and became an iconic tune of the era.

Romanian movie 'Child's Pose' wins at Berlin fest

BERLIN (AP)—A Romanian drama that centers on a woman's effort to cover up her son's responsibility for an accident in which a boy is fatally injured won the Berlin film festival's top Golden Bear award on Saturday.

"Child's Pose," directed by Calin Peter Netzer, emerged as the winner from a field of 19 films that included a strong eastern European contingent this year—the 63rd edition of the event, the first of the year's major European film festivals. Netzer said he was "a little bit speechless" at the award.

The tale of corruption and guilt depicts the efforts of an upper-class mother, played by Luminita Gheorghiu, to bribe witnesses to give false statements and keep her son—the driver, who was speeding at the time of the accident—out of prison.

"This is about a ... pathological relationship between mother and son," he told reporters later. "The rest is really just a backdrop," Netzer told reporters, stressing that it is "a very universal story" and that "corruption is not something which is only taking place in Romania."

A runner-up Silver Bear went to "An Episode In the Life of an Iron Picker," in which a Bosnian Roma, or gypsy, couple re-enact their own struggle to get treatment after their baby died in the womb. The movie was made on a tiny budget by Danis Tanovic, whose "No Man's Land" won the Oscar for best foreign-language film in 2002.

Nazif Mujic, the husband, was voted best actor by the festival jury.

"Of course, I'm not an actor—I simply played my own story. I played myself in my family. I don't know what I should say," Mujic, who says that he still has no regular job and collects scrap metal as he did at the time the drama played out, told 3sat television.

Best actress was Paulina Garcia for the title role in Chilean director Sebastian Lelio's "Gloria." Garcia plays a divorcee at the end of her 50s trying to stave off loneliness, rushing into singles' parties but struggling to overcome disappointment.

American filmmaker David Gordon Green was honored as best director for "Prince Avalanche," a movie about two road workers whiling their way through a long, monotonous summer with little more than each other for company. It's a remake of an Icelandic film, "Either Way."

TV show with Pistorius' dead girlfriend airs

JOHANNESBURG (AP)—Reeva Steenkamp's last wish for her family before she was shot dead at boyfriend Oscar Pistorius' home was for them to watch her in a reality TV show that went on air in South Africa on Saturday night, two days after her killing.

Sharon Steenkamp, Reeva's cousin, told The Associated Press that the model and law graduate was "proud of being in the show" and reminded them in their last conversation to make sure that they watched it.

The South African Broadcasting Corp. aired the "Tropika Island of Treasure" program, showing the late Steenkamp—the victim of a Valentine's Day shooting at the home of Pistorius, the Olympic star and double-amputee athlete. She is laughing and smiling, and blowing a kiss toward the camera in Jamaica when it was filmed last year.

South Africans also saw her swimming in the ocean and watching people jump off a cliff and into the sea, shaking her head as they leaped.

SABC said it was dedicated to Steenkamp and displayed the words "Reeva Steenkamp 19 August 1983 - 14 February 2013" between images of a rose and a candle in a short tribute before the show aired. She was also seen blowing the kiss as she sat on a Jamaican beach and her name again appeared on screen with the years of her birth and death.

The country was rocked Thursday when news broke of Steenkamp's shooting death at the upscale house of the star athlete. Pistorius was arrested and charged with her murder and remains in custody in a police station. His family has strongly denied prosecutors' claims that he murdered her.

Stevie Wonder not happy with Lil Wayne's lyrics

ATLANTA (AP)—Stevie Wonder is not happy with Lil Wayne's vulgar lyrics that reference Emmett Till, a black U.S. teen whose murder in 1955 for allegedly whistling at a white woman changed the national conversation on race and civil rights.

The R&B legend says the rapper's disturbing verse should not have made it beyond the recording studio for the world to hear.

"You can't equate that to Emmett Till," Wonder said. "You just cannot do that. ... I think you got to have someone around you that—even if they are the same age or older—is wiser to say, 'Yo, that's not happening. Don't do that.'"

Wonder, who says he is a fan and friend of Lil Wayne, made the comments when asked what he thought of the controversial lyrics in an interview Thursday.

On a remix to Future's song "Karate Chop," Lil Wayne compared a rough sex act to the tortuous death of 14-year-old Till in Mississippi. Following a crude reference to rough sex, Lil Wayne indicates that he wanted to do as much damage as had been done to Till.

Till's family has asked the rapper for an apology, and Epic Records, Future's label, said the official song will not feature the vulgar words and is employing "great efforts" to pull it down.

Wonder, 62, hopes the 30-year-old Grammy winner understands the perspective of the Till family and chooses his words wisely in the future.

"Sometimes people have to put themselves in the place of people who they are talking about," Wonder said.

Judge sets May trial date for Kardashian divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Kim Kardashian has a due date for her baby and now a trial date for her divorce from NBA player Kris Humphries.

A judge on Friday set a May 6 trial for the reality TV star who wants to end her marriage before July, when her child with Kanye West is due.

Kardashian filed for divorce on Oct. 31, 2011, after she and Humphries had been married just 72 days. Their lavish, star-studded nuptials were recorded and broadcast by E! Entertainment Television. The trial is expected to last three to five days and could reveal details about Kardashian's reality show empire, which includes "Keeping Up With the Kardashians" and several spinoffs.

Two judges determined Friday that Humphries' lawyers had adequate time to prepare for the trial.

Humphries wants the marriage annulled based on his claim that Kardashian only married him for the sake of her show. She denies that allegation and says the case should be resolved through what would be her second divorce.

Humphries' attorney Marshall Waller asked for a delay until basketball season is over.

Wedding dance jealousy may push potential partner away

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend of one year, "Eddie," has been invited to the wedding of a waitress who works at a restaurant/bar he frequents. I was not invited. Eddie doesn't dance and has slow danced with me only once. When I told him I would not appreciate him slow dancing with anyone there, we had a heated argument. Eddie told me I have no right to tell him what to do and that I'm trying to control him.

I have run this by many people—male and female—and they all say it's inappropriate to slow dance with anyone but your significant other, especially when she's not present.

I feel Eddie has little regard for my feelings. If he really cared for me, he wouldn't want to dance with anyone else. I am interested in your thoughts.

HIS ONLY DANCE PARTNER

DEAR HIS ONLY: If you would like to "graduate" from girlfriend to fiancée, you will stop trying to control him and tell him you hope he has a good time at the wedding.

Insecurity is not an attractive trait, so calm down and recognize that a dance is only a dance. From your description of Eddie's lack of ability, I seriously doubt he will be a sought-after partner on any dance floor.

DEAR ABBY: Our two children (ages 4 and 1 year) have hyphenated last names. It works well and the names sound elegant together.

My husband and I have made this known in the family and have discussed it when asked about it by various family members. However, over the last four years our choice has been ignored by two relatives from separate sides of our family. They persist in using only my husband's last name for correspondence and gifts. He has suggested returning the mail as "addressee unknown," which I think might come across as rude.

Is there any way of having our children addressed correctly by relatives who seem to want to ignore their real names?

NEW YORK MOMMY

DEAR MOMMY: Before doing it your husband's way, try this: Have another chat with the non-compliant relatives, who may come from a different generation. Explain that you gave your children hyphenated last names for a reason—that you want to be equally represented—and the omission of "your" name hurts your feelings. If that doesn't work, then go back to plan A because you don't want your children to be confused.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I will be married 25 years and have three children. In my family, my dad was the boss. I always was, too, but never was involved very much with the kids. My wife never really complained about it. She just wanted to keep the family together.

Now that the kids are gone, I realize I should have been a better husband. She mostly ignores me and spends her time with the kids and going places. I feel left out. She doesn't even want to celebrate our upcoming 25th. Should we? I know my dad drank a lot, and now I find myself thinking often about how it must have been for my mom back then.

REGRETTING IN ILLINOIS

DEAR REGRETTING: Ask your wife why she doesn't think that 25 years of marriage is something to celebrate, because it should be. She may spend her time with the kids and going places because that is what she HAS been doing for all these years.

There is still time for you to mend this marriage, provided you are both willing to work on it. However, it may take the services of a marriage counselor to break the ice.

SHOWBIZ TIDBITS

Hugh Grant becomes father for 2nd time

LONDON (AP)—Hugh Grant says he has become a father for the second time. The "Four Weddings and a Funeral" star used his Twitter account to announce Saturday: "Am thrilled my daughter now has a brother. Adore them both to an uncool degree." He said both children "have a fab mum" and: "To be crystal clear, I am the Daddy." The birth was confirmed by Grant's publicist, Carrie Gordon. Grant's sometime girlfriend Tinglan Hong gave birth to the couple's daughter in 2011. Grant, 52, a critic of what he sees as press intrusion, told Britain's media ethics inquiry that he and Hong had been harassed by paparazzi when their daughter was born. He joined Twitter last year as (at)HackedOffHugh to promote press reform in the wake of Britain's tabloid phone hacking scandal.

DreamWorks partners on Russian theme parks

GLENDALE, California (AP)—DreamWorks Animation SKG Inc. says it is licensing its characters to a developer of theme parks in Russia. The Regions Group of Companies plans to open parks in St. Petersburg, Moscow and the Ural Mountains city of Yekaterinburg in 2015. DreamWorks said Friday that the parks will be Europe's largest year-round indoor entertainment zones. The zones will be part of larger entertainment complexes, each featuring a mixed-use movie and concert hall, a movie theater, a hotel and a retail center. Some franchises featured at the parks will include "Shrek," "Madagascar," "How to Train Your Dragon" and "Kung Fu Panda," as well as upcoming films such as "Turbo," a movie set to debut in July. DreamWorks shares were up 54 cents, or 3.2 percent, at $17.48 in afternoon trading.

Bob Barker urges NC senators to oppose possum bill

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Former game show host Bob Barker is telling North Carolina lawmakers that caging a live possum for a New Year's Eve event in the mountains isn't good show business. Barker wrote this week to a state Senate committee's members asking them to oppose a bill that would let the organizer of the Brasstown "Possum Drop" keep suspending a possum in a box every Dec. 31 and lowering it gently to the ground. People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals complained about the event. A judge ruled state regulators don't have explicit authority to permit the display. A House bill approved this week would change that. Barker says the event is inhumane and that loopholes for animal abuse shouldn't be created. PETA released the letter. The 89-year-old Barker is a longtime animal rights activist.

Ross beats Evans in dunk contest

HOUSTON (AP)—Terrence Ross had to settle his nerves at the start of the All-Star dunk contest. By the end, he was calming down a ball boy he needed as a prop for his winning slam.

The 6-foot-6 Toronto rookie leapfrogged Michael Costolo, the son of Twitter CEO Dick Costolo, whipped the ball between his legs and hammered home a one-handed dunk to beat defending champion Jeremy Evans in the climax to All-Star Saturday.

"I told him the day before that I was going to jump over him, but I never told him I was going to go through the legs," Ross said. "He was kind of nervous. When I first grabbed him, he said, 'You're not going to hit me, right?' I said, 'No, I'm not going to hit you.'"

Ross seemed to be unsure of himself in the beginning, botching his first three dunk attempts in the first round. The crowd exploded when he finally pulled it off—flicking the ball behind his back on the way up and hammering home a one-handed dunk.

He earned a perfect 50 and immediately relaxed.

"This is honestly my first really big dunk contest, so I was nervous," said Ross, the eighth overall pick in last year's draft out of Washington. "And not making a dunk didn't make it easy. I had to get myself together."

Ross earned 58 percent of the fan vote in the championship round, outdoing Evans' prop-filled display. Evans leaped over a painted portrait of himself and former Jazz giant Mark Eaton, who sat on a box and held up the ball for Evans to swipe on his way to the rim.

Kenneth Faried, James White, 2007 dunk champion Gerald Green and Eric Bledsoe also were in the field, while Kevin Durant, Kobe Bryant, Chris Paul and Dwyane Wade were among the All-Stars taking in the show.

Green started it off by taking a lob from Indiana teammate Lance Stephenson off the side of the backboard and soaring in for a reverse slam. White played off his "Flight White" nickname when he split two columns of cheerleaders dressed as flight attendants for a powerful two-handed dunk.

Hall of Famers Bill Russell and Julius Erving, singer Alicia Keys, rapper Drake, director Spike Lee and comedian Chris Tucker were among those sitting courtside. Keys is performing at halftime of Sunday's All-Star game.

Earlier, Cleveland guard Kyrie Irving beat San Antonio's Matt Bonner to win the 3-point contest. Irving, who will play in his first All-Star game on Sunday, hit his first seven attempts and 20 of 25 overall in the final round to finish with 23 points, two shy of the record held by Craig Hodges and Jason Kapono.

Irving also played in the Rising Stars Challenge on Friday night, scoring 32 points. He came into the weekend with the goal of making a big splash.

"Yeah, this weekend was just basically about earning everybody's respect, and getting a chance for people to see me that don't usually see me," Irving said. "We're not nationally televised. This weekend is to show my face to the fans and get everybody acclimated to my face in the league."

Portland rookie Damian Lillard beat Philadelphia's Jrue Holiday to win the Skills Competition. Players navigated through a dribbling circuit, had to make a jumper from the top of the key and hit passing targets. Lillard finished the course in 29.8 seconds. Holiday's time was 35.6 seconds.

"I think the biggest thing for me was to try not to be too cool and speed through it," Lillard said, "but take my time with the passes and shots."

Houston point guard Jeremy Lin and defending champion Tony Parker also were in the field, but didn't come close to qualifying for the championship round.

In the first competition of the night, the trio of Miami's Chris Bosh, WNBA star Swin Cash and Hall of Famer Dominique Wilkins won the Shooting Stars competition, beating a team of Oklahoma City guard Russell Westbrook, WNBA star Maya Moore and former Houston Rocket Robert Horry.

Each team had two minutes to make shots from six locations on the floor, including one from half-court. Wilkins sank a half-court shot for a team time of 1 minute, 29 seconds. Westbrook rimmed out several half-court tries and time ran out before he and his teammates could make one.

The NBA tweaked the scoring format for this year's All-Star skills exhibitions, with teams representing the East and West competing for charities. The Western Conference defeated the East 140-125. The West earned $350,000 for charity and the East earned $150,000.

Hunter voted out as head of NBA players' union

HOUSTON (AP)—Billy Hunter was ousted from his job as executive director of the union in a unanimous vote by NBA players who said Saturday they will "no longer be divided, misled, misinformed."

"This is our union and we have taken it back," players' association president Derek Fisher said.

Fisher said it was a day of change for the union, which has seemed inevitable since a review of the union last month was critical of Hunter's leadership and urged players to consider whether they wanted to keep him.

They didn't.

"We want to make it clear that we are here to serve only the best interests of the players," Fisher said. "No threats, no lies, no distractions will stop us from serving our memberships."

Hunter said in a statement that he hadn't received word of his dismissal and blasted the interim executive committee for the process it followed, saying "certain individuals made sure the outcome was pre-ordained."

"In addition, given the legitimate legal and governance questions surrounding the eligibility of the members who voted and the adherence, or lack thereof, to the constitution and bylaws, I do not consider today's vote the end, only a different beginning," Hunter said. "My legal representatives and I will resume communication with the NBPA to determine how to best move forward in the best interests of all parties."

In brief remarks, Fisher said a new executive committee was elected and he will remain as president. The Spurs' Matt Bonner is vice president, Miami's James Jones is secretary-treasurer and the Nets' Jerry Stackhouse the first vice president. The Clippers' Chris Paul, Golden State's Stephen Curry, Denver's Andre Iguodala, the Hornets' Roger Mason, Jr. and the Clippers' Willie Green are vice presidents.

Hunter had led the union since 1996, guiding the players through three collective bargaining agreements and helping bring their average salaries to more than $5 million, highest in team sports. But Fisher pushed for the review after a falling out between the two leaders, and though it found Hunter wasn't guilty of any criminal activity involving union funds, it cited a number of conflicts of interests and poor choices that led the players to remove him.

Commissioner David Stern was aware of the union's actions but had little comment.

"We await notification from the union as to who we should be dealing with because it has been a principle of faith with us that we will deal with whom-ever the union tells us to deal with," Stern said.

Released in January, the review conducted by the law firm Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison LLP criticized Hunter for hiring family members and friends. It said he knew his 2010 contract extension wasn't properly ratified by union rules, and raised questions about everything from travel expenses to the amount he spent on gifts.

Players acted quickly, putting Hunter on a leave of absence on Feb. 1. He hoped to be invited to Saturday's annual meeting, which included about 35 players, superstar LeBron James among them.

But Hunter's attorneys said their client was told he wouldn't be welcomed. They said his contract was legal and indicated there could be a lawsuit if the players removed him and attempted to withhold the more than $10 million that remains on his salary.

"We do not doubt that this process will possibly continue in an ugly way," said Fisher, who then reminded reporters that there are three ongoing government investigations into Hunter, likely the reason he didn't take questions after his remarks.

It's a swift fall for the 70-year-old Hunter, a former athlete who was well-respected by many players. But agents didn't like him, questioning his bargaining strategies and frustrated they didn't have a bigger role in his union.

Hunter's family did, and that was another central issue of the report. He had since fired his daughter and daughter-in-law, and cut ties with a financial institution that employed his son. He also instituted an anti-nepotism policy at the NPBA.

"After 17 years of representing NBA players during CBA negotiations and defending their rights in other proceedings, not once was there an occasion where one side was denied an opportunity to be heard," Hunter said. "The current interim regime in control of the NBPA has set a terrible precedent for the union. It violates every tenet of fairness upon which the union was founded. Now that this has occurred, I will continue to examine all of my options, including whether the fairness that was absent from the NBPA process might be available in a different forum."

Fisher, Paul, Bonner, Mason and Jones were holdovers from the previous executive committee. Stackhouse, who along with James was vocal during the meeting, joins Iguodala, Curry and Green among the newcomers.

Fisher and Hunter clashed during the 2011 lockout and their fractured relationship divided the union. Hunter originally persuaded the executive committee to vote to request Fisher's resignation last year. Fisher did not resign and instead pushed for the outside review, which lasted more than eight months and cost the union more than $4 million.

The law firm reviewed NBPA documents and emails, and interviewed more than three dozen witnesses. It found that Hunter spent more than $100,000 on gifts for executive committee members—including a watch worth more than $20,000 for Fisher before their falling out—and accepted a payout of $1.3 million for unused vacation time when records made it unclear how his time off was kept.

Fisher remains president even though he isn't on an NBA roster, having asked the Dallas Mavericks for his release after a brief stint earlier this season. He gave no update on what would happen to the executive director position. Union attorney Ron Klempner was appointed to the position on an interim basis when Hunter was placed on leave.

Pistorius' family strongly denies murder charge

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP)—Oscar Pistorius is “numb with shock as well as grief” after the shooting death of his model girlfriend at his home in South Africa, the runner’s uncle said Saturday, as his family strongly denied prosecutors’ claims that he murdered her.

Arnold Pistorius spoke with The Associated Press and two other South African journalists about his nephew’s arrest in the killing of Reeva Steenkamp, who was shot four times on the morning of Valentine’s Day. Arnold Pistorius spoke to reporters from the garden of his three-story home in the eastern suburbs of South Africa’s capital, Pretoria.

The statement, the first on camera and directly made in person by Pistorius’ family, also came out strongly against prosecutors seeking to upgrade the charge against Pistorius to one of premeditated murder, which carries a sentence of life in prison.

“After consulting with legal representatives, we deeply regret the allegation of premeditated murder,” Arnold Pistorius said. “We have no doubt there is no substance to the allegation and that the state’s own case, including its own forensic evidence, strongly refutes any possibility of a premeditated murder or murder as such.”

He said the family was “battling to come to terms with Oscar being charged with murder.”

The track star’s arrest in the killing of 29-year-old Steenkamp shocked South Africa, where Pistorius was a national hero and icon dubbed the Blade Runner for his high-tech carbon fiber running blades and revered for overcoming his disability to compete at the London Olympics. She was discovered in a pool of blood before dawn Thursday by police called to Pistorius’ upscale home in a gated community. Authorities said she had been shot four times, and a 9 mm pistol was recovered at the home.

Pistorius remains held at a police station pending a bail hearing Tuesday. Police have already said they’ll oppose Pistorius being released before trial. A premeditated murder charge also makes it more difficult for his defense team to get bail.

On Saturday afternoon, Pistorius’ lawyers visited the Brooklyn police station in Pretoria, where the athlete is being held. His younger sister Aimee, who stood alongside Arnold Pistorius when he made his statement, also was at the police station later.

There will be a variety of hearings before Pistorius, 26, could go on trial. In South Africa, there are no juries, so a judge ultimately would decide Pistorius’ guilt or innocence, sometimes with the help of two advisers. At an initial hearing Friday, Pistorius sobbed and held his head in his hands at times. He has yet to enter a plea in the case.

The family denial that Pistorius committed murder doesn’t necessarily mean that they say he didn’t shoot her, as murder is a legal term. Initial speculation immediately after the shooting Thursday suggested that it could have been accidental, though police say they are not currently considering that.

Arnold Pistorius did not discuss the circumstances of the shooting, but said that his nephew and Steenkamp had become very close since they started dating in November.

“They had plans together and Oscar was happier in his private life than he had been for a long time,” the uncle said.

As Arnold Pistorius read his statement, Pistorius’ sister Aimee stood nearby and broke down in tears at one point. Her uncle stopped reading for a moment to put his right arm around her. Pistorius remains very close with his uncle, a man he once lived with as a teenager.

“Words cannot adequately describe our feelings,” his uncle said. “The lives of our entire family have been turned upside down forever by this unimaginable human tragedy and Reeva’s family have suffered a terrible loss. As a family we are trying to be strong and supportive to Oscar as any close family would be in these dreadful circumstances.”

The entire family was “devastated,” Pistorius’ uncle said, and was “grieving for Reeva, her family and her friends.”

Since news of the killing, shock waves have rippled across South Africa, a nation of 50 million where nearly 50 people are killed each day, one of the world’s highest murder rates. U.N. statistics say the nation has the second highest rate of shooting deaths in the world, behind only Colombia. Others have focused their attention on Pistorius and his fascination with fast cars, cage fighting and firearms.

Steenkamp, who graduated from law school, is known in South Africa for appearing in commercials and as a bikini-clad model in men’s magazines. On Saturday, South Africa’s state broadcaster SABC planned to air a reality TV show featuring the model. Another portion of the show released earlier Saturday included a clip of her swimming with two dolphins, which tap her on the cheek with their snouts.

“I think the way that you go out, not just your journey in life, but the way that you go out and the way you make your exit is so important,” the blonde-haired Steenkamp says in the video. “You either made an impact in a positive or a negative way, but just maintain integrity and maintain class and just remain true to yourself.”

“I’m going to miss you all so much and I love you very, very much.”

Haas shoots 64 to take lead at Riviera

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Bill Haas had no reason to think this round at Riviera was going to be anything special.

With an iron in his hand, he failed to make birdie on the par-5 opening hole, the easiest on the golf course. Solid iron shots led to a pair of birdies on the front nine, and with Riviera playing tough in warm, dry conditions on Saturday, he was part of a large group challenging for the lead.

Three holes changed everything.

Haas made a tough 30-footer for birdie on No. 9. He pitched in from 60 feet for eagle on the scary par-4 10th. And he hit a good bunker shot with little margin for error on the par-5 11th that set up a birdie.

Just like that, he was on his way to a 7-under 64 and a three-shot lead going into the final round of the Northern Trust Open.

His 64 was the best round of a difficult day by three shots, and it was nearly eight shots better than the average score. It put Haas at 12-under 201, leaving him in good position to become only the eighth back-to-back winner in the 76-year history of this tournament.

All he cares about Sunday is winning.

“It’s very difficult in this game to just pull away from the rest of the field,” Haas said. “You’ve only seen a few guys ever really do that, and those are guys like Jack Nicklaus, Tiger Woods, Phil Mickelson. So I think I’ve just got to stay in the moment, don’t let my emotions get the best of me.”

A year ago, Haas was two shots behind going into the final round and wound up winning in a playoff over Mickelson and Keegan Bradley. This time, he has a comfortable margin over U.S. Open champion Webb Simpson and former Masters champion Charl Schwartzel, who each thought they did well for a 68.

John Merrick bogeyed the 18th hole for a 70 and joined Simpson and Schwartzel at 9-under 204.

Luke Donald overcame a sloppy start—three bogeys in a six-hole stretch—with four birdies on the back nine to salvage a 70 that put him four shots behind, along with Fredrik Jacobson (72).

Mickelson was hopeful of making a move and instead went the other direction. He missed three par putts of about 6 feet on the front nine and had a 72, putting him nine shots behind. Ernie Els, playing with Mickelson, also dropped shots early and dropped out of the hunt with a 73.

The round started with 20 players separated by five shots. Thanks to Haas and his flawless play, only eight players were within five of the lead.

It might not be easy for anyone to catch up to Haas if the sunshine continues to bake Riviera. The fairways were so firm that tee shots were running some 50 yards after they landed, and the greens were firm enough that balls ran out an extra two feet around the hole.

“I had a lot of 3- and 4-footers for par,” Simpson said.

He was pleased with his round of 68 that included only one bogey, but when Simpson pulled out his cellphone to check the leaderboard as he sat down for lunch, he saw Haas on top with a 64.

“So he played great,” Simpson said.

Most impressive about how Haas has gone around Riviera in the last few days is 40 consecutive holes without a bogey. The last one he made was on Thursday when he missed a 4-foot putt.

But on this day, it was his birdies and one eagle that made the difference.

“I was just kind of plugging along out there and then all of a sudden, made a nice putt at 9, chip-in at 10, good up-and-down at 11,” he said.

And off he went.

The birdie putt on the ninth was about 30 feet, and Haas had to play it outside the hole and hit it with purpose. It broke sharply into the cup, and then he hit 3-wood off the tee on the 10th, leaving it some 10 yards short of the green with the left pin. He had seen Greg Chalmers play a pitch from about the same area to 6 feet short of the hole and figured that was a good play—anything that rolled by the hole was likely to keep going off the green and down into a valley.

Haas hit an even better shot, landing it about 15 feet short of the hole and watching it roll into the cup. He hit his second shot into a bunker near the green on the par-5 11th and got that close for birdie, and later in his round, he splashed out of the sand on the par-5 17th to inside a foot for his final birdie.

Simpson, who arrived at Wake Forest the year Haas graduated, figures Haas will have to make a few mistakes for anyone to make a big move.

“I think Bill is in a position, if he keeps a three-shot lead and goes and plays well again, that it’s going to be hard to catch him,” Simpson said. “But with the golf course this tricky, you get a guy that has a good front nine, he could be tied or even in the lead with nine to go. So anything can happen tomorrow.”

Schwartzel is the only player with all three rounds in the 60s. He made two mistakes, one of them more of a bad break. His tee shot on the 10th bounded through the green with such pace that it stayed toward the back slope of the rear bunker. His shot came out too soft and rolled back off the green, leading to bogey.

He came out weakly from the sand on the 15th and had to make a 6-footer to escape with bogey.

“It’s easy to make bogeys,” Schwartzel said. “The course got a bit firmer and, playing in the last few groups, the greens get a bit more bumpy. So it’s hard to make birdies and also to keep the bogeys off the card.”

“I probably won’t change anything,” he said. “Just keep playing the way I am and see if I can give myself chances and see what happens. I know the game is good enough to be able to win tomorrow.”

the Lions, 10-2; and X-clusive run-ruled the Fielders, 11-1, in five innings.

The season continues at the Tan Ko Field tomorrow at 6pm with a Big League matchup featuring the Fielders against the Rays.

BIG DIVISION
Braves 4, Ol'Aces 1

The Braves broke the ice in the first inning as Peter Lieto drew a one-out walk and stole second base before being brought home off a double by Greg Iskawa.

They then added three more runs in the third inning off four hits, a walk, and a pair of fielder's choices. Lieto and Iskawa were each credited with RBI singles.

The Ol'Aces' lone run came in the top of the fourth off a double by John Santos, but the Braves defense did a good job avoiding a late rally in the last three frames.

Iskawa batted 3-for-3 with an RBI and a run. Ol'Aces' Jared Sablan swung 2-for-3.

Braves 6, Fielders 5

The home team Braves sat on a 2-0 lead from two hits in the first inning for five exchanges until the Fielders tied it up in the top of the sixth off a two-out single by Leroy Regis that was followed by a walk and an RBI triple by Joe Atalig.

Then the match went into bonus frames as both teams managed to bring in a run in the last inning of regulation.

Fielders' Arthur Jebehn delivered Steven Aguon home with a sacrifice fly, while Braves' Lemarc Iguel singled in Brandon Lieto.

Then the Fielders' Ricardo Dela Cruz cracked a two-run homer in the top of the eighth that brought around Poland Masaharu. However, the Braves stopped the bleeding and managed to bring in three runs for the win in the bottom side.

Peter Lieto led off with a triple and scored off a double by Robert Tudela who stole third base and scored off a dropped third strike that boarded Vince Torres.

Torres would make it all the way around as the Fielders struggled to find the strike zone.

Winning pitcher Peter Lieto gave up two runs, one earned, off four hits, and two walks with six strikeouts through six innings.

Padres 9, Ol'Aces 7

The Padres took a 5-0 lead in the first inning off two hits, two walks, a fielder's choice, and some untimely errors, but the Ol'Aces countered with two runs in the second inning from a two-RBI base knock by ninth batter Dave Hosono.

The Ol'Aces tried to make a comeback, 3-5, in the top of the fourth inning off a base rip by Jonathan Indelacio, but the Padres answered in the bottom frame and went ahead, 7-3.

Ray Tenorio led off with a walk and scored off a wild pitch, while A.J. Lizama singled on and was doubled in by Jordan Pangelinan.

Ol'Aces' Jake Flores was grounded home after leading off the fifth with a triple, and his crew briefly tied the match at 7-up with three more runs in the sixth inning off three hits, a walk, and a bean ball.

Jonah Flores singled on and scored off a wild pitch, while Jake Santos and Jake Flores each logged RBI singles.

The Padres did not panic, however, and reclaimed the lead in the bottom side off a trio of hits, including an RBI triple by Carl Camacho and an RBI base hit by Pangelinan.

The defending champs then did a good job holding strong for the last three outs.

JUNIOR DIVISION
Red Sox 8, Falcons 2

Red Sox's Craig Aguon belted a one-out triple and was grounded to the dish for first blood and the group went on to added two more runs in the third inning off a hit, a fielder's choice, and some errors, scoring Jobe Reyes and Aguon.

Then the Red Sox trudged forward, 6-0, on the top of the fourth inning off a string of six hits, including RBI singles by Delin Ruesora, Reyes, and Vicente Leon Guerrero that were sandwiched between a pair of doubles by Jose Tydingco and Ryan Aguon.

The Falcons were only able to answer with 1 run in the bottom frame and then sifted out its final run in the following exchange, however the Red Sox ended up getting them back.

Red Sox's Jonathon Sagun batted 2-for-3 with a run and a stolen base Winning pitcher Craig Aguon went the distance and gave up two runs, one earned off, a hit, eight walks, and a hit-by-pitch with 11 strikeouts.

Enforcers 10, Lions 2

The Enforcers racked up four runs in the first inning off three hits and an RBI fielder's choice by Cedric Camacho. Juan Quitugua reached on an error and stole home, while Kier Agda jacked a RBI double that was followed by an RBI base knock by Jeff Dela Cruz.

The Enforcers then added two more runs in the second inning off a leadoff double by Franklin Lizama and a triple by Camacho.

The group led it, 8-1, after the fourth inning and picked up two more runs later in the fifth as they coasted through the last two frames.

Winning pitcher Agda logged a complete game and gave up two earned runs off five hits and a hit-by-pitch with nine strikeouts.

Lizama batted 3-for-3 with a base on balls for four runs; Dela Cruz went 2-for-2 with an RBI, two base on balls, a run, and a stolen base. Lions' Ben Maratita batted 2-for03 with an RBI and a run.

X-clusive 11, Fielders 1

X-clusive held a solid 5-1 lead after three innings with a trio of runs in the first inning off two walks and two hits followed by a pair of runs to start the third frame thanks to some sketchy pitching as the Fielder's brought its third hurler to the hump early on.

The Fielders managed to produce a run in the bottom frame, but X-clusive jolted ahead, 10-1, in the fourth inning off just one hit followed by a handful of walks and some errors. Marvin Lopez bagged a two-RBI single.

X-clusive's Jay Kalen scored four times, one-upping his teammate Allen Cepeda uted points in the last period though it was four quarters of tough defense that won the game. Fidelino led the Dolphins in scoring with 9 points.

FINALS

Jon Posner in Week 1, 8-2, marched into the finals after a walkover win over Dong Min Lee, while Rai prevailed over Rafael Jones in the other semis pairing.

In the girls U12 finals, Tania Tan meets Malika Miyawaki. Tan was way ahead of Asia Raulerson in their semis duel in the upper half of the draw last Saturday, 5-0, when the latter was forced to retire due to a minor injury. Miyawaki had a full game in the lower half of the bracket and booted out Grace Choi, 6-2.

EASY

3-3 record, sealing its third win early in the fourth quarter after Cell Pro hung around in the first three period. Cell Pro faced a manageable 11-point deficit at the end of the third canto, 46-57, but folded up completely in the fourth period when it was held scoreless in the first four minutes of the final frame.

With Cell Pro missing one shot after another in the early goings of the fourth quarter, Docomo's lead ballooned to 23, 69-46. Eugene Mangali led the breakaway, scoring 6 of Docomo's first 12 points.

Mangali and Docomo's three other starters then sat out in the final half of the fourth period with the team's over 20-point lead intact and Cell Pro getting its first basket in that canto off Bernard Montano's jumper. The remaining half of the fourth was then played just to wait for the final score, as Cell Pro fell to a 1-2 slate.

Mangali paced Docomo with his 19 points, while Marlon Sison chipped in 14. Montano was the lone double-figure scorer for Cell Pro with his 19 markers.

In Division B, Shane Deleon Guerrero and Lester Vertudez teamed up in the lopsided win for Adobo with the former firing a game-high 22 points and the latter contributing 21.

The girls U15 semis games were also completed last Saturday with Carol Lee blanking Liza Atalig, 8-0, to advance against Heras, who thwarted Emily Jones, 8-3.

Meanwhile, in the two divisions (girls U18 and U10) with a round-robin format, Jireh Warren, Negahr Rastguiy, and Mikayla Lopez boosted their chances for the championship.

Warren is unbeaten after two games and a win over Erika Tuttle today will give her the girls U12 championship. Lopez and Rastguiy are also undefeated after two matches and they collide today at 1pm to decide the winner of the girls U18 tiara.

Deleon Guerrero nailed 10 of his total points in the second canto, while Vertudez added 9, helping Adobo turn a 15-7 advantage to a 36-20 halftime lead. Adobo went on to protect its double-digit lead in the second half, as Vertudez and Deleon Guerrero continued to burn the hoops and also drew help from Mike Saturno, who knocked in 10 of his 15 markers in the 20 minutes of the one-sided match.

Susupe never had a chance against Adobo, as it played with a depleted lineup and could not keep up with its much younger and faster opponent. The losing squad had only six players and only four made it to the scoreboard. Juluis Tabamo paced Susupe (1-4) with his 21 points.

First Game

Adobo 82 – Deleon Guerrero 22, Vertudez 21, Saturno 15, Dela Cruz 8, Tadifa 4, Yap 3, Aglipay 2, Orejola 2.

Susupe 62 – Tabamo 20, Lansang 14, Cadag 12, Mina 11.

Scoring by quarters: 15-7, 36-20, 55-41, 82-62.

Second Game

Docomo 77 – Mangali 19, Sison 14, Metran 8, Sablan 8, Sacramento 7, Cruz 6, Hernandez 4, Barbo 4.

Cell Pro 57 – Montano 19, Sacramento 9, Santos 8, Dayrit 7, De Dios 6, Iglecias 4, Loste 4.

Scoring by quarters: 22-18, 40-35, 57-46, 77-57.

The varsity Rays extended its flawless streak to five wins in a row, while the Dolphins dipped to a win-loss card of 5-2, but remained in second place in the standings.

The Kagman High School Ayuyus (3-3), Eucon International School Blazers (1-5), and Mount Carmel School Knights (1-5) complete the field.

MHS is dominating the junior class and improved its undefeated run to seven in a row. The Agape Christian School Torchbearers (3-4), KHS (2-3), SSHS (2-3), and the Saipan International School Geckos (0-4) are all trailing at a distance.

MHS also has a hold on first place in freshmen play with a solid record of 3-1 that fronts KHS (2-2) and SSHS (1-2).

There are no games scheduled for today as the season continues tomorrow at 4pm at the MHS Gym with a junior pairing between ACS and KHS followed by the main varsity ticket featuring Eucon versus KHS at 5:30pm.

The varsity match started out in a 21-all deadlock after the opening 10 minutes and remained anyone's game at intermission.

SSHS' Jack Aranda and Emerson Feria teamed up for a baker's dozen that was complemented by a handful of free throws by Bryl Alegre, while MHS utilized a more collaborative effort, scoring with six different sets of hands.

Then Rays point man Aranda pulled on a 7-point string to start the second period and then distributed to his comrades as the group clung to the lead, 43-41, at halftime. MHS' John Darag sank two 3-pointers for 12 markers in frame two.

The second half unfolded nothing like the former as SSHS ran away from its rivals, 64-53, in the third period.

Aranda went off for 11 points in the surge and the team never looked back in the final exchange.

Feria came up big in the pay-off period and logged 9 points to safe-guard the victory.

Aranda led three teammates in double figures with 25 points, while Darag topped the box score with 26 in defeat.

In the junior match, MHS trotted in front, 14-6, in the first quarter off 7 markers by big man Shane Deleon Guerrero and managed to cling to the lead at midpoint, 25-19, as SSHS' James Kintaro and Tyler Palacios led a second quarter rally with 6 points apiece.

MHS had an ace up its sleeve, however and unleashed its sixth man, Justin Cayading, in the third quarter who broke loose for a dozen points that helped the Dolphins pull away, 45-25.

MHS had little trouble securing the win in the last frame as Cayading added 7 more for good measure and finished with a game-high 19 points, while SSHS' Kintaro turned in 18 on the short end.

Jun Fidelino and Kobe Mendoza paced MHS in the first quarter of the freshmen game with a couple of baskets apiece for an early, 11-7, advantage and a handful of checks by their teammate Justin Loza in the second quarter preserved a 19-12 favor at the half.

MHS was then stood up in the third quarter and managed just one bucket as SSHS' mainstay Art Borromeo put his Rays within a possession heading into crunch time, 18-21.

At that point Borromeo had accounted for all but 4 of SSHS' offense, but he was held to just a basket down the home stretch as the Dolphins came together as a group and easily secured the win.

Weekend Sports

The week belonged to the 2012 top athletes and officials honored during the NMASA Annual Sports Banquet last Wednesday at the Kanoa Resort.

Honored for their accomplishments last year were athletes Mikayla Lopez, Clay McCullough-Stearns, Todd Montgomery, and Lia Rangamar and officials Jeff Race and Laurie Peterka.

Lopez was named 2012 NMASA/TSL Foundation Female Student Athlete of the Year for dominating local tennis competitions and winning in the 2012 North Pacific Qualifying Tournament in Guam and in the 2012 Pacific Oceania Junior Championships in Fiji. Clay McCullough-Stearns took the 2012 NMASA/TSL Foundation Male Student Athlete of the Year award after leading his team to championships and winning MVP plums in both the COPSSA and MISO volleyball leagues and also ruling beach volleyball events.

Montgomery claimed the NMASA Male Athlete of the Year award for winning two championships in the PIC tournament, while Rangamar earned the NMASA Female Athlete of the Year citation for her record performance in the Oceania Regional Championships in Australia.

Jeff Race got his fourth Coach of the Year award, notching the 2012 plum for leading the CNMI's successful campaigns in the NPQ and POJC. Peterka was named Sports Administrator of the Year for her works with Northern Mariana Islands

Volleyball Association, which organizes tournaments for local athletes, especially for the youth, and provides assistance to interscholastic leagues.

Sharing the center stage with the 2012 top athletes and officials last week was baseball and softball great Reno Celis, who was inducted to the 2013 class of the CNMI Hall of Fame.

Meanwhile, three competitions opened last week.

Week 1 of the 2013 White

Coconut Tennis Classic kicked off at the American Memorial Park, while the U15 and U18 divisions of the 2013 NMIFA Youth Spring League started both at the Hopwood Junior High School Field and Oleai Sports Complex Field. The 2013 season of the Saipan Little League Baseball also opened last week at the Francisco "Tan Ko" Palacios Ballfield.

Ongoing competitions on Saipan also continued last week.

In the NMIVA Sunset Co-ed Beach Volleyball Tournament, Dig This, Beaches and Vacos downed separate foes at the sand courts of Fiesta Resort & Spa Saipan to advance to the finals.

Over at the Gualo Rai Basketball Court, the Sexy Boys and Adobo kept their undefeated record in Division B of the DLX/Anchor Strong caging, while action in Division A resumed.

Still in basketball, Marianas High School swept Kagman High School in the MISO caging, winning the varsity and junior varsity games at the MHS Gymnasium.

At the Garapan Basketball Court, Insider and Yuman Construction defeated separate foes in the Blue Haus caging.

Bragging rights will be at stake in the 2013 White Coconut Tennis Classic today as finalists collide in seven singles divisions title matches at the American Memorial Park tennis courts.

In the boys U12 finale at 11am, in will be Joshua Abragan versus Vincent Tudela. Abragan took the finals berth in the upper half of the draw after beating Tony Atalig in the quarterfinals last Saturday, 8-6, and stunning top seed Steven Goodwin in the semis yesterday, 9-8. Tudela notched the other finals ticket after an 8-1 victory over Haruya Eda in the quarters and a semis upset, too, over No. 2 seed Robbie Schorr, 8-6.

In the U15, it will be a battle between Top 2 seeds Dylan Ackerman and Michael Ren. The top-ranked Ackerman advanced to the finals, follow-
